Mose Can Cluck
Free Young Women
Champion Boy and Girl
Bolivia Kills a Few

—By Arthur Brisbane—

SAPELO ISLAND, Ga., Dec. 17—In different parts different things are important. At Harvard it is the astronomical instrument that reveals 165 new variable stars. At Hollywood, it is the variable star that can reveal 165 new emotions. In Wall Street it is the broker who knows when to go in and when to go out.

Down here on this east coast of Georgia on Howard Coffin's shooting preserve, the important person is Mose, who can imitate the cluck of a wild turkey.

Mose, colored, thinks he is 68 years old, isn't sure. There is no uncertainty about his ability to imitate wild turkeys. He puts his fingers on either side of his nose, while hiding in the bushes, clucks, and wild turkey gobblers walk up to be shot.

"I always imitate the turkey HEN," says Mose, "because of the two, the gobbler is the more foolish."

It is that way with men, as proved in history of Cleopatra and other ladies.

Three young women from England, Margery Sharp, Nancy Samuel and Amelia Lockhart, are here to debate with American college girls. The British and American girls will argue from viewpoints as far apart as moon and earth. From their cradles they have been taught to think on lines far apart.

But they agree that youth has been too much hampered, men have bossed women too much. All true.

Part of the live stock show activities in Chicago included judging the healthiest boy and girl in the United States.

Thelma Svarstad, a South Dakota girl, who won the female championship, is 17 years old, blonde, strong, weighs 122 pounds, 5 feet 2 inches tall, drinks plenty of milk, no tea or coffee and expects to be a teacher.

The boy champion is William Tobias of Michigan, 15 years old, weighs [illegible] pounds, 5 feet 6 inches tall, likes [illegible] admires Jack Dempsey, also drinks lots of milk. Milk dealers please notice this in your advertisements.

From a live stock, and many other points of view, these are fine American children.

But somewhere in America there is a little baby shivering in its mother's arms, delicate, with a thin little body, a big head, wide, anxious eyes, that some day will do things that the healthiest boy and girl will never do.

Write that down for your comfort, if you have a child that isn't so robust.

Paraguayans in a raid across Bolivia's border killed 25 Bolivians.

Now in the battle of Ft. Boqueron Bolivians kill 100 Paraguayans, who do the best they can, and kill 20 more Bolivians.

Bolivia celebrated on Sunday and "Paraguay is preparing to meet the situation," that is to say, preparing to kill more Bolivians.

That Bolivians used airplanes in their attack should interest our people at Washington, some of whom think the airplane is still a toy. Paraguay accuses the Bolivians of using American loans to purchase fighting material.

Bolivia's President Siles tells 30,000 cheering before his palace that Bolivian troops "gave a splendid exhibition of Bolivian patriotism, in line with glorious tradition."

That is how wars start.

Peace agreements do not prevent war. Safety is in being ready. That diminishes probability of attack.

Herbert Hoover is safely out of the Argentine, where Anarchists planned to wreck his train. Americans will be glad of that.

Iriguoyen, polite and friendly, accompanied Mr. Hoover everywhere in Buenos Aires.

President Campisteguy of Uruguay met Mr. Hoover on his arrival in Montevideo.

One more stop, and the next President will be on his way back to the United States. Plenty of work awaits him here.

News of King George was encouraging, early yesterday, thanks to treatment by light therapy.

The back and chest of the royal patient are exposed to artificial light rays that penetrate the tissues, and in a mysterious way stimulate the curative activities of the white blood cells.

King Gains After Turn for Worse

London, Dec. 18—The upward turn in the condition of King George, which was broken by a slight setback late Monday, was progressing favorably but slowly this afternoon, it was stated by Buckingham Palace officials.

The King is still in a state of extreme exhaustion. He took to his bed just four weeks ago today.

In palace circles the downward fluctuation late yesterday was attributed to discontinuance of the use of sedatives. None have been administered in 48 hours. The physi-

Rome, Dec. 18—The 58-year-old conflict between the Vatican and the the eve of settlement, it was learned from authoritative quarters today.

Negotiations between representatives of Pope Pius XI and Premier Mussolini have been under way for many months.

The agreement, which is believed imminent, is expected to be based upon the following principles:

1—Regulation of the future relations between Italy and the Vatican.

POLICEMAN RESCUES WOMAN

Patrolman John Graham, who claims to be the biggest policeman in Massachusetts, crashed two doors with his shoulder today, burst his way into a burning dwelling in Park ave., Revere, roused three sleeping occupants and carried Mrs. Leon Hirsh to the street in his arms.

The fire, of undetermined origin, started in an empty apartment on the first floor of the Hersh home.

Graham, on the beat with his fellow officer, John Delaney, smelled smoke. Sending Delaney to pull an alarm, Graham, who weighs [illegible] pounds, attempted to enter the dwelling.

He found the front door locked. He broke it open. Finding no one on the first floor, he went upstairs. The door of the Hersh apartment was locked. He broke that.

He found Leon Hersh, Mrs. Hersh and their 14-year-old son, Leon, Jr., all asleep in bed. He awoke them, hustled the boy and the man downstairs and carried Mrs. Hersh after them.

GOVERNOR SCHEMED WITH FIN. COM. TO SAVE HIM—MAYOR

"The Governor quit to the Elevated in the closing days of the session on the Governor sq. act," Mayor Nichols charged today in his latest broadside of the controversy between heads of city and state.

"Both the governor and Finance Commission [illegible] as to the facts, so [illegible] could provide the [illegible] personally conducted [illegible] shifts and quitting [illegible] the hole into which he had ignominiously fallen," the mayor declared, in another part of his blast statement.

From the governor's [illegible] battle [illegible]

he had asked the attorney-general to draft more stringent laws to "protect the Boston city treasury."

After charging that land which cost $11,000 had been sold to the city of Boston for $182,000, the mayor announced he had already held conferences with Atty.-Gen. Warner in the matter of land damage cases. In an earlier statement

BOLIVIA HALTS ITS WAR PLAN FOR MEDIATION

La Paz, Dec. 18 (AP)—Foreign Minister Elio today made public a communique saying: "Bolivia accepts the good offers of the Pan-American Conference of Conciliation and Arbitration as being essential for the investigation of the origin of the conflict which consisted of an attack, unmotivated, by Paraguay on our Fort Van Guardia.

"A note will be sent to the president of the conference."

The Paraguayan government yesterday accepted an offer of the good offices of the Pan-American conference which also had been made to Bolivia. The Paraguayan acceptance was sent to Secretary of State Kellogg, who forwarded the Pan-American offer.

Members of the Pan-American conference believed that Bolivia eventually would accept the mediation offer.

Goodfellows! Will You Aid?

When next week rolls around—well, this day will be Christmas.

On that day the homes of the fortunate will be cheerful. Then there are other homes.

Homes such as that of a little Roxbury girl whose father and mother both are ill, the mother in a hospital and the father an out-patient three days a week.

It is a home in which the little girl must play the role of "Little Mother" on the meagre sum of $12 a week. And there are three other children, and expenses for medicine.

In many homes of Greater Boston, the aroma from the steaming turkey will spell above $12 in the curl of the steam. But in this Roxbury home the same sum must spell food, rent, clothing, light and heat—and medicine—for a family of six.

The only answer to this problem

GOVERNOR CALLED 'SHIFTY'

the governor had charged that Boston was being robbed.

He said his own plan was to have the attorney-general collaborate with the Governor's Council in bringing about legislatiton that "will protect the city treasury."

The governor added that he hoped the mayor would relent in his opposition to the East Boston vehicular triffic bill and the Governor Sq. subway proposal, and would "play Santa Claus," so the people could find these two things in their stockings on Christmas morning.

Mayor Nichols issued a peppy statement assailing the governor, accusing him of being "long on talk and short on facts," and of descending to "slanderous talk."

The governor said:

"It was in connection with Governor Sq. legislation that I first encountered the mayor's opposition. He contended that if the various communities which were benefited by the subway paid a part of the expense, then Boston would not have a clear title to its complete ownership. Then when in accord with his objections the bill was finally passed, relieving the communities of any interest in the undertaking, he refused to sign the bill.

UP TO PUBLIC

"I want the public to know I have done my level best to give them these two great facilities. If they are satisfied to delay them or to go without them, I have no objection. It is their business, and whatever their decision is will be entirely satisfactory to me.

"I am attaching a letter which has to do with land damage cases. It tells its own story.

"A piece of land bought in 1919 for $7000; $4000 is added to it in 1926. That makes $11,000. It is assessed for $12,800. The city's experts say it is worth from $15,000 to $25,000. The petitioner's experts say it is worth anywhere from $163,000 to $319,000. It is sold for $192,000. In other words, it cost $11,000 and was sold to the city of Boston for $192,000.

"Now perhaps the people of Boston are satisfied to have transactions like that going on. I do not believe they are.

"Another piece of land cost $90,000 in 1925 and two-thirds of it was sold to the city of Boston for that amount shortly after. Another piece of land cost $150,000 in 1923 and one-third of it was sold to Boston for $198,603.82.

"The various opinions and the differences that exist between the valuation placed by the city experts and those of the petitioners' experts are most interesting and illuminating.

"The matters referred to in this statement contain information to which I think every citizen is entitled, and whatever conclusion he comes to is perfectly satisfactory to me, but it is useless to talk about the inefficiency of government and its constantly rising expenses unless we are willing to concentrate on a discussion like this one in order to determine its merits.

"I feel very strongly that the mayor should approve the Governor sq. subway and the East Boston tunnel, and if he has any perfecting amendments to suggest, that he present them to the incoming Legislature.

MAYOR TALKS

"In regard to these land damage cases I have consulted with the attorney-general and I am going to ask him to collaborate with the judicial council in preparing some legislation that will better protect the city treasury."

The mayor said:

"I took no oath of office to support every sham and pretense signed by an executive who proves by everything he says that he doesn't know what he is talking about."

The mayor concluded his attack upon the governor with a final declaration that he has "driven him out of his boasted intention of running for mayor of Boston and driven him out of the Republican party."

He charged Governor Fuller with being wholly destructive in his statements, asserted that the land settlements to which the governor referred had been approved by the State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long, and said that both the governor and the Finance Commission were indifferent to the facts so long as they could make statements which would reflect upon him.

In reply to Governor Fuller's statement that there is need of speedy action towards the construction of the traffic tunnel and that delays for another year may jeopardize the chances of getting this big improvement, the mayor charged that the governor is desirous of getting the work done by a commission which he can "pack" with his friends. He said that is all the governor knows about the tunnel bill.

In his accusation that the governor has been wholly destructive in his discussion of the matters, the mayor said that it has been the policy of Fuller to attack public men, and he referred to the governor's attack, during his earlier political career, upon former Congressman Ernest W. Roberts, the late Senator Lodge and Joseph E. Warner.

The mayor backed up his claims that the tax settlements had been properly compromised by letters from Tax Commissioner Long and Corporation Counsel Frank S. Deland, who advised settlement on the basis set forth in the report of the Finance Commission.

In the report of the finance commission, made public by Governor Fuller, it was said that Long approved the settlements in the belief that the full value of the property had been taken into account, but the mayor asserted that the State tax commissioner knew all about the matter in every detail and that he recognized the settlements as decidedly proper.

Governor Fuller said in his statement that he believed the mayor, if sincere, would accept the East Boston tunnel act as it came to him and seek the amendments he desires at the next session of the Legislature.

This course should be taken, in the governor's opinion, inasmuch as the mayor had not sought to have the bill changed at the last session. Mayor Nichols said in reply that the governor knew when the bill was on his desk that it was not satisfactory to him.

"When the governor quit to the Elevated near the close of the session," the mayor said he (the mayor) made up his mind that he would not approve any legislation which would be a burden to the taxpayers of Boston.

The mayor made no very strong defense of his failure to act on the Governor sq. subway, except to say that the responsibility for that, as well as the tunnel, was wholly his own, and that he intends to protect the interests of the taxpayers of Boston.

Fuller Asks Mayor to Play Santa for Public

"I hope the mayor will play Santa Caus and that the people of Boston will find the East Boston Tunnel and the Governor Sq. Subway in their stocking on Christmas morning."—Governor Fuller.

REVERE PASSES SUNDAY BALL MEASURE

posed to Sunday baseball argued at length on why the will of a majority of the voters should be disregarded.

The councillors of Revere, however, decided that the will of the people was still supreme and the measure was adopted.

Those opposed to the Sunday sports, as a part of their argument, told how earlier in the day the Boston City Councillors had disregarded the will of the people and had tabled the sports bill. They urged that the Revere Councillors do likewise but their argument was of no avail.

BOSTON TABLES MOTION

Motion to adopt the Sunday sports bill, approved by the people at the November election by more than a 3 to 1 vote, was tabled by the Boston City Council after a brief discussion.

The Sunday baseball order was introduced by Councillor and Senator-elect Michael J. Ward of Roxbury, calling upon the City Council to ratify the measure.

On a motion of Councillor Frederic E. Dowling of Brighton the order was temporarily tabled, in the face of opposition from Councillor John I. Fitzgerald of the West End.

Councillor Fitzgerald charged that the council was afraid to bring the question of Sunday baseball out in the open meeting.

Councillor Fitzgerald said:

"If there is anything to be said here pro and con, let it be said in the open chamber by everybody. The time has come to put a stop I believe, to having these so-called executive sessions. They should be stopped, Mr. President, because they are not executive sessions.

SAYS TIME IS WASTED

"Matters that could be well taken care of here are referred there, and the time of the council is wasted. Sometimes hours are wasted there when we could put through here promptly matters that are referred to that so-called executive session.

"It is not an executive session, Mr. President Every member of the body who has served in the Legislature knows what an executive session means, and when they have an executive session up there nobody is allowed in but members of the committee.

"It is time now that the members of this council assert themselves and show that they have backbone and courage. Members of the council have been ridiculed and stuff has been published that ordinarily would not have been published if said on the floor of the council.

The Boston Evening American has been a sturdy advocate of Sunday baseball in Boston. An overwhelming majority of the people of the city favor it. See the editorial by Myles T. McSweeney on Page 19 of this issue. Read that editorial NOW.

BOLIVIA HALTS IN WAR ON PARAGUAY

Nations was officially informed today.

Bolivia replied to the League Council's second note of warning dispatched on Sunday by French Foreign Minister Briand, saying:

"Our troops are forbidden to attack or advance. But, inasmuch as Paraguay began mobilization, we are taking precautions indispensable to our national security."

Paris, Dec. 18 (AP)—Foreign minister Briand, president of the council of the League or Nations, and Sir Eric Drummond, secretary-general, who came to Paris in connection with the Bolivian - Paraguayan dispute, today lunched together. Later it was learned Briand planned to see the Bolivian minister and the Paraguayan charge d'affaires in Paris late this afternoon.

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—With its offer of mediation in the Bolivian-Paraguayan controversy accepted by both countries, the way was clear today for the Pan-American conference on arbitration to take steps to reconcile the two nations.

Dr. Victor Maurtua of Peru, chairman of the special committee appointed by the conference to suggest conciliation procedure, conferred with other members of his committee and planned to call a meeting as soon as Bolivia's acceptance should be received here.

VATICAN IS IN PEACE MOVE

2—Italy will recognize the papal state as a sovereign entity.

3—The papal state will be formed of territory upon which the Vatican now stands with surrounding properties.

4—The papal state will possess at least one railway station instead of a territorial corridor to the sea as first suggested.

5—All embassies and legations accredited to the Vatican will move inside the boundaries of the papal state. Italy will name an ambassador to the Vatican.

6—No customs duties will be exacted, collection of existing duties being left to the present administration.

7The Vatican agrees to accept money set aside yearly since 1870, which has hitherto been refused.

The negotiations have been progressing slowly and quietly. It was significant that the Pope made no mention of them in his allocution at yesterday's consistory.

The five popes who have reigned at the Vatican since the church lost its temporal sway over mid-Italy in 1871 have been voluntary prisoners in the Vatican, never leaving church ground. This was in accordance with a vow not to set foot upon the soil of the Italian state.

Under the Italian law of May 31, 1871, the popes lost their secular authority and the territory over which they had ruled was incorporated with the Italian state.

Pope Pius IX occupied the Vatican when this law was enacted. He as well as the pontiffs who followed him followed the precedent of never leaving the Vatican grounds.

KING HAS TURN FOR BETTER

cians are trying hard to keep the King going without them.

The morning medical bulletin said: "In spite of the King having passed a disturbed night, there is a slight improvement in both the general and local conditions," the bulletin stated.

It was signed by Sir Stanley Hewett, Sir Hugh Rigby and Lord Dawson of Penn.

The Central News Bureau said it had learned the King passed an uncomfortable night, although able to get some sleep towards morning.

Following the depressing bulletin issued by the royal physicians last evening there came a report that the King had lapsed into unconsciousness.

Early today, however, a palace official denied the report and added that although the King had been restless through the evening he was resting more easily.

In addition, medical authorities pointed out that even if the report had been true it would not have been cause for undue alarm as the King had been in a similar semi-comatose state several times.

The Prince of Wales was at the palace and did not leave until about 11 o'clock. He again had a long conversation with the physicians. Sir Stanley Hewett remained overnight as usual.

After the King apparently had been rallying steadily for two full days, last evening's bulletin, which said that he "had been somewhat restless" and was not continuing the progress earlier noted, came rather unexpectedly.

CROWDS AT PALACE.

In palace circles, however, it was said a bulletin of that kind should have been expected as nothing in the nature of steady progress had previously been achieved.

Alarmed at the apparent setback revealed in last night's bulletin, a large crowd congregated about the palace this morning.

Many had waited throughout the night and refused to leave, despite police assurances that fluctuations in His Majesty's condition should not cause unnecessary alarm.

WAY OF FIXING CAR INSURANCE MAY BE UPSET

Another step in the court action that may upset the entire method of fixing compulsory automobile insurance rates in Massachusetts was taken before Judge Edward P. Pierce of the Supreme Court today, when attorneys for a number of persons involved in insurance litigation appeared before him.

Asst. Atty.-Gen. Roger Clapp represented the State and informed the court of the importance of the questions involved in the seemingly unimportant cases that have been appealed from the Superior Court.

One of the questions is whether or not Acting Insurance Commissioner Arthur E. Linnell exceeded his authority in fixing arbitrary zones with different insurance rates in each zone.

In one case the defendant claims that his constitutional rights have been violated and that there is nothing in the constitution that gives the Assembly the right to delegate such power to one man.

Judge Pierce was impressed with the importance of the case and ordered that the pleadings be completed and that all parties involved appear in court on December 28. This will be preliminary to sending the cases before the entire bench of the Supreem Court for a final decision.

Choicest of Liquors; Not a Drop to Drink

A LEGACY of almost priceless liquors, probably as a Christmas "gift," will shortly be bestowed upon a Massachusetts man by the United States Senate.

He will be formally handed the keys to this rare heritage; will have access to it at will—but will be forbidden to even sample one brand of the hoarded treasure.

His friends may enviously fondle flagons of almost-forgotten wines in their eager hands; may revive the now hazy thrill of breathing the bouquet of aging brandy yet neither they nor he can quaff one toast to his good fortune.

For years this valuable "cellar" of liquor has been accumulating; its serried ranks of bottles growing deeper and their contents growing mellow, undisturbed.

All he may do is gaze in wonderment at this strange gift and perpetuate its descent to his successor as his predecessors have done for him.

Upon whom is this 20th century model of the mantle of Tantalus to be flung by governmental appointment?

James E. Ingraham, retired Peabody tanner, has been named but not yet confirmed as the choice.

If, and when, the Senate names him as appraiser of the Port of Boston, this liquor legacy automatically falls to him, comes under his control, and for which he will be held responsible to preserve intact.

It represents, in the main, the unsuccessful attempts of amateur smugglers to tote a quart or two ashore when returning from transatlantic trips, augmented by seizures from ships' crews, intent on selling contraband on the wharf to thirsty American visitors.

There it is on the sixth floor of the appraisers' stores on Atlantic ave., piled as neatly as by a butler in a Back Bay home—and there it will remain; for how long nobody knows.

But even if the incoming appraiser desired to violate his oath of "total abstinence," there stands in his way an insurmountable obstacle.

John Cunningham, actual guardian of the "cellar," storekeeper for the Government, is the "watchdog" of the treasure.

It is John's boast—to the disgust of his friends—that since seized liquors were placed in his charge after prohibition enactment not an ounce has been liberated that he cannot account for.

Attaches of the appraisers' stores declare on good authority that John knows to the last precious bottle the number under his eye and guards them as jealously as if they were gold.

So, if the temptation arises in the holiday season to cajole the appraiser into making a gift from his ample liquid store, remember John Cunningham.

He is adamant to all appeals.

COURT TO ACT IN 'NEGLECTED TOTS' CASE

For their own welfare, an 18-month-old baby and two girls of five and eight years were made defendants in a court action in Roxbury today.

The baby is Carl Sedgerly, son of Charles and Getrude Sedgerly, while the two girls, aunts of the little fellow, are Ada Foster, eight, and Vera Foster, five.

The three, thinly clad and suffering from hunger, their scanty clothing rainsoaked, were found playing in a wet ash and rubbish heap in an alley off Brown st. For hours the youngsters alternately cried with the cold and hunger and laughed as they engaged in some new game. Neighbors saw the plight of the children and notified police.

Two officers found the youngsters, but could not find the parents of either the baby or the two sisters. The three were wrapped in warm blankets and taken to the City Hospital, where they were fed and put to bed.

Today the case of the children was before Judge Donovan in Roxbury court. They were charged with being neglected children and a complaint was issued by the judge. In addition to the police who found the children, an agent of the S. P. C. C. appeared. The court ordered the "trial" of the three set for Thursday morning, and they were remanded in the care of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Under Massachusetts law, abandoned or neglected children must first be made defendants in court action before action can be taken against parents. If the children are found "guilty" of being neglected they become wards of the state and action is then taken against parents.

The foster sisters are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Foster of Brown st., Roxbury. The baby is the son of another daughter of the Fosters, Mrs. Sedgerly. The police were told by neighbors that the Fosters went to New Hampshire to visit their daughter, who is ill there.

No action has been taken against the parents and nothing will be done until the case of the children is disposed of in court.

ASK FULLER TO SAVE JOBS OF CITY WORKERS

Members of the Boston City Council, accompanied by Boston members of the Legislature will wait upon Governor Fuller tomorrow with a request that he demand an immediate halt in Civil Service Commissioner Elliott H. Goodwin's alleged policy of ruthlessly discharging city employes.

The council voted in favor of a plea to the Governor after a session almost wholly devoted to sharp attacks on Commissioner Goodwin's attitude toward workers who have been guilty of minor irregularities under civil service rule.

Debating Commissioner Goodwin's activities, council members declared that the commissioner contemplates the dismissal of from 2000 to 3000 city employes between now and Christmas.

Most of the "victims," said councilmen, are laborers who have been guilty of trifling inaccuracies in their civil service applications. Many of the offenses are of years gone by, speakers asserted.

Councilman John F. Dowd declared one man was discharged because he was arrested for breaking a window 15 years ago.

HOPE TO RAISE S-4 TODAY

Submarine Base, New London, Ct., Dec. 18 (AP)—The submarine S4, one the undersea tomb of 40 men, today was the prize for which navy divers fished with new lifting hooks in the gales-swept waters of Long Island Sound.

Sunk deliberately without a crew on the first anniversary of the crash with the destroyer Paulding in which the submarine sank off Provincetown, Mass., the submersible rested in mud at a depth of 55 feet as divers worked to attach massive chains to four lifting hooks, or "padeyes," designed to hitch the submarine to huge pontoons for the raising operation today.

The sinking of the craft took place in Great Salt Pond, a landlocked bay off Block Island, R. I.

The operation, the first of a series of experiments with newly developed rescue and salvage apparatus, had for its primary object the determination of the accessibility of the lifting hooks to divers working under conditions such as those that might be encountered in cases of disaster like that of the S4 and the S51.

GREAT BROADCAST OF CHRISTMAS CAROLS IS LAUDED BY ALL

NATION TO JOIN IN AS CHORUS

ROOM NOISY

The room was full of noise and confusion; chattering of children, and laughter of women. Now and then a male voice added a bass note. Waitresses hurried, trays fell, an atmosphere of hysteria seemed about to break over that room.

Then suddenly and softly the organ began to play "Silent Night! Holy Night!" and a hush fell over that great confusion, that Babel of tongues; the hush of peace; the holy hush of reverence. It was as silent as a chapel.

Life seemed to have stopped in that busy mid-week restaurant, to worship. I had a hard time in keeping the tears back. I saw a man near me wipe furtively at his eyes with his napkin. He was trying to pretend that he wasn't touched.. It was all very beautiful.

It is always so when we hear the beautiful Christmas anthems and carols. There is something about these ancient and beautiful things that subdues us. Therefore, it is with great anticipation that I look forward to the Hearst coast-to-coast broadcast of the ancient and beautiful carols of Christmas time.

NATION TO SING

With my dear friend, Rev. Dr. Sr. Parkes Cadman, directing that service, and the consciousness that an entire nation will be singing together, we will all enter that holy hush, that silence of reverence, that mood of Christmas reverence.

I congratulate the Boston American and the Hearst newspapers on this beautiful contribution to our Christmas atmosphere of worship and reverence.

Accompanying the Christmas eve editions of the Boston Evening American and all of the 28 Hearst newspapers, readers will receive free booklets with the official concert program and the woods and music of the carols.

To assure getting these booklets and sharing in this stirring experience, readers should place advance orders with their newsdealers for next Monday's editions.

NATION-WIDE HOOKUP

The nation-wide extent of the radio hookup makes this carol program unique—the biggest joint Christmas service in the history of mankind. The broadcasting will be on the National Broadcasting Company network, and the unforgettable tunes, in which the radio audience with their booklets can join, will go into the ether here from station WBZA.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, who needs no introduction to radio listeners, and Rev. William J. Finn, C. S. P., of the congregation of St. Paul the Apostle, New York, are taking leading parts. The Paulist Choristers and the Mediaevalists of New York, two widely renowned groups of singers, supply the voices. Father Finn, as countless thousands know, is the choirmaster of the choristers.

Never before has a coast-to-coast hookup been employed to unite the people of the nation in song.

ORGAN PRELUDE

This mighty volume of inspiring music goes forth over America promptly at 11 p. m., when the organ prelude, "March of the Magi King," is played by Father Finn.

Seated in their homes radio listeners will hear Rev. Dr. Cadman's introductory remarks, followed by the wondrous carol music in a chorus of sound in which every listener can join.

Throughout the broadcast Dr. Cadman will be the director of the service, and will deliver a Christmas message near the close, while Father Finn, who created the Mediaevalists, as well as the famous Paulist Choristers, will preside at the organ and direct the singing.

180,000 Sign for Kellogg Treaty

Washigton, Dec. 18—Declaring that international disputes should never again be settled by warfare, a petition calling for prompt ratification of the Kellogg peace treaty and bearing more than 180,000 signatures was laid before President Coolidge by the federal council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The document was presented at the White House by Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, of New York, and Dr. William L. Darby, of Washington, D. C. Copies were given to Secretary Kellogg and Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee, which has the pact under consideration.

FATHER OF 3 IS HUNTING JOB

Weldon Boutilier, who slept for three nights in a chair in the Narrow Gauge railroad station at Lynn, because his family had been evicted for non-payment of rent and there was no place for him to sleep, was about this morning feeling fit and looking for a job after a night in a bed under the same roof with his family.

Boutilier lost his job as a fireman on the Narrow Gauge when the road was electrified. He has a wife and three children, the oldest of the children being four. When the family could not meet the rent, they were evicted. Friends took in the wife and children but Boutilier, after seeking work throughout the day, was forced to sleep in the Narrow Gauge station at night.

A number of Lynn social agencies refused to aid Mrs. Boutilier unless she had her husband arrested for non-support.

BASEBALL TEAM ENJOINED

Attleboro, Dec. 18—A temporary injunction has been granted against the Attleboro baseball team of the New England League by Judge Robert F. Raymond in New Bedford, on petition of the Interstate Railroad Co., of Attleboro, which seeks to collect $500 claimed to be due for the transportation of players during the past seas

William A. McDonough, of Lawrence, holder of the Attleboro franchise, and Claude B. Dividson, president of the New England League, are named as defendants.

The court action is the first step to hold the Attleboro franchise, which, it is understood, Lawrence has been after. It is said that four prominent men here are ready to take up the franchise providing they get it with a clean bill. With Sunday baseball now possible, fans want the club they started to build up last summer.

PROMOTION FOR FLIERS URGED

Washington, Dec. 18 (Universal)—Warned that the morale of Uncle Sam's fliers is at the breaking point, the House today again passed the Furlow bill providing for a separate promotion list for the Army Air Corps.

The bill was tacked on as a rider to a Senate measure which it is hoped will now go to conference and thus be assured of passage before Congress adjourns. This action was taken because the Furlow bill, passed at the first session, appeared likely to die unacted upon in the threatened legislative jam in the Senate.

A large factor in its passage was a letter from Col. Charles A. Lindbergh strongly endorsing the bill. This was read by Representative Furlow (R), of Minnesota, who also pointed out that all except one of the army world fliers have now left the service because of their failure to win merited promotion under the present law. He said that Lieuts. Maitland and Hegenberger, who startled the world by their flight to Hawaii, will retire eventually only with the rank of major unless the present bill passes.

23 in Sacco Parade Each Fined $20

The 23 Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, who paraded in front of the State House on November 3 last, with banners, were before Judge Hayden in the Suffolk Superior Court and paid fines of $20 each on the charge of sauntering and loitering.

They were tried before a jury and found guilty. They gave the names of Harry J. Canter, Nicholas Peters, Sholan Reinstein, Benjamin Kelsen, Harry Sandeler, Sadie Glanz, Mildred Young, Louis Capernatos, Anna Oster, Michael Maslanka, Israel Pizer, Clara Halpern, Goldie Waldman, Harry Shoacat, Kuziva Bondar, Annie Findman, Susie Wallace, Alter Rosenberg, Betty Schlosberg, Eva Ston, Jacob Krantz, Thomas Halin and Jacob Finkel.

To Transfer Fuel in New Record Try

Washington, Dec. 18.—Army airplanes will start a re-fueling endurance flight over Los Angeles about dawn New Year's day in the hope of breaking all endurance records for heavier-than-air craft, the War Department revealed. The tri-motored test plane, "Question Mark," will be provided with about 800 gallons of gasoline and necessary oil every 24 hours.

A single motored supply ship equipped with hose will make contact with the "Question Mark" three times a day, the planes flying about 17 feet apart during the transfer period.

Widow Seeks Body of Artist Davies

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—The widow of Arthur B. Davies, internationally known artist and former president of the American Painters' and Sculptors' Society, is in Italy seeking her husband's ashes. In a cable Mrs. Davies, who had gone abroad to locate her husband, said she had learned that her husband was dead and she was now seeking friends of his in Italy who could tell her the particulars of his death and the name of the city where his ashes are being held.

Hub U. S. Court Contract

Washington, Dec. 18—The Treasury Department assured Congressmen Underhill and Dallinger that it will hold a public hearing before making final award of the contract for supplying quarters for the federal courts in Boston, during the remodelling of the Boston federal building.

TRUCK DRIVERS ASK MORE PAY

A report on the action of the special meeting of the Truck Drivers' Union, 25, will be submitted to employers' representatives, this afternoon in the office of John H. Gilbody, 60 State st. The latter is secretary of the Master Truckman's Association.

It is understood that the special meeting of the truck drivers discussed a new wage and working agreement, and that an increase of $2 a week for the different branches of the work will be asked.

The team-owners are understood to have offered a counter proposition to the workers for consideration by the union, but what action was taken by the meeting was not announced.

Flu Closes College

Montreal, Dec. 18—The Ontario Agricultural College and the MacDonald Hotel are closed as a result of the influenza epidemic. The order to close the college came in the midst of examinations.

NAVY SHIP BILL UP IN SENATE

Washington, Dec. 18—Decks are cleared for action for the naval cruiser bill expected to reach the Senate today for debate.

The measure, one of the major items on the administration's legislative program, was delayed from consideration Monday because of unusual debate on the treasury appropriation bill conference report and the Hawes prison-made goods bill.

This later measure, introduced by Senator Hawes (D) of Missouri, is now the unfinished business of the Senate but is expected to reach a vote today. It would restrict prison-made goods from interstate shipment.

The naval bill, providing for construction of 15 cruisers of 10,000 tons each and one aircraft carrier, will follow the Hawes bill on the Senate calendar.

WREATH HANGER DIES IN FALL

It was death, not the spirit of Christmas that lurked in the holy wreathes that Joseph R. Galvin, City Hall employe, was given to hang from the front windows of City Hall.

Galvin, who would have been 39 this Saturday, slipped on the set sill of one of the windows of the city planning board's office and fell two stories to the lawn on the School st. side of the building. He died a short time later.

Galvin, whose home was at 38 Summer st., Hyde Park, had been employed by the public buildings department for the past five years. His principal duty was polishing furniture about the building.

SOCIETY WOMEN RUM SLEUTHS

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 18—Five attractive and smartly dressed young women, several of them socially prominent, are frequenting saloons in this city. But they are not consuming any of the wet goods that they are buying. Instead they are turning it over to authorities engaged in a crusade against liquor selling, which started with the wrecking of a saloon last Monday by a modern Carrie Nation.

They have obtained evidence against six barrooms, police say, and in 65 other places were refused liquor, it was revealed. Many other women have offered their services, and several sought police permission to use axes in cleaning up "joints" in their own neighborhoods.

WILKINS MAKES A FLIGHT FOR OBSERVATION

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition

Copyright 1928, by the New York American and Universal Service, Inc.

Deception Island (Antarctica), Dec. 18—(Via Whaler Hextoria and Kup San Francisco Examiner wireless station.) Fate smiled more kindly today on our hopes for a getaway into the south on our aerial Antarctic expedition, clearing weather enabling us to make a short raid southward by way of investigation.

Tonight we are waiting, with seaplane ready to start at a moment's notice.

Today, Deception Island was basked in sunshine. Anticipating good weather, our seaplane, fully loaded, had been placed at anchor at 10 o'clock last night.

At 1 a. m. the wind lulled and the clouds dispersed only to pile up again from low on the water in Brandsfield Strait to high over Graham's Land plateau.

A watch was maintained from a hill at the harbor mouth.

The cloud wall remained loose and ice drifted into the harbor, with the tide ruining any chance for a seaplane to take off, but shortly after noon today we took a light load in the plane San Francisco, now on wheels, and flew south to investigate.

Climbing steeply to 6000 feet, we were level with the cloud tops. Graham's Land for 100 miles and as far ahead as we could see was obscured except for a few isolated mountain peaks.

We could have continued on above the clouds, but the flight would have served no useful purpose. We must see the country in order to explore it.

We are earnestly hoping that conditions will improve and are waiting with the seaplane ready to start at a moment's notice. The improvement in conditions today was a joy to us and an indication that we can expect better days to come.

'WHITE SLAVE' PROBE BY U. S.

New York, Dec. 18 (INS)—Shady employment agencies in New York city, Cincinnati and Baltimore—and in towns in Pennsylvania and Connecticut—came under federal scrutiny today following the revelation that young girls fell into the hands of alleged "white slave" traffickers after they had applied for positions as "hostesses."

The federal investigation is a sequel to the arrest of Maj. Robert Kent, Jr., former army officer and "gentleman of leisure" and four young women in a raid on an 18-room roadhouse.

Summon Seminoles to Try Slayer of Woman

Miami, Fla., Dec. 18 (AP)—The ancient call to council of the Seminole Indian nation traveled in its mysterious way across the Everglades today, summoning the medicine men of the tribe to sit in judgment on Josie Billie, alleged slayer of the widow of Billie Roberts. The squaw died in a Miami hospital from a knife wound.

Cory Osceola, hailed as the true chief of the Seminoles, being a descendant of the famous defiant Chief Osceola, said Josie Billie had confessed to him.

Seminole law knows no demurrer. Death, punishment, exile or acquittal is meted out by unanimous verdict after the evidence is reviewed. Capital punishment is carried out by using a thin rope or thong to strangle the culprit.

Burglar Scare by False Alarm

For two hours today, a burglar alarm in a store in Dunster st., Cambridge, went on a spree, arousing Harvard students in nearby dormitories and causing the police no end of trouble. A short circuit caused the alarm. Police failed in their efforts to shut it off, and the electric light company declined to interfere. Finally the owner of the store was called to the rescue. There was no burglar.

'King David' Fulfills Biblical Prophecy

North Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 18 (INS)—If, when the Prince of Wales succeeds to the throne of the British empire, he assumes the title of "King David," as has been indicated in dispatches from abroad, it will be fulfillment of a biblical prophecy, according to George W. Bird, Baptist lawyer, who is a student of Zionist affairs.

The name "David" is the one by which the Prince of Wales is called in the royal household.

"Inasmuch as Palestine is now under the mandate of Great Britan," Bird said today, "the assumption of the title King David by the Prince of Wales would bear out the fourth and fifth verses of the third chapter of Hosea, written 2700 years ago."

BAR WOMEN IN $200,000 FEE CLUB FOR MEN

Henpecked husbands who do not have sufficient income to belong to a club where they can find surcease from their domestic troubles, will soon find paradise in the town of Waltham.

A fund of $200,000, available under the will of the late Hambin L. Hovey of Watham, can be used only for the erection of a recreational center for men. The center, under the will, must provide amusements, a department for mental betterment and facilities for bathing.

Hovey died in 1904, leaving his fortune to his wife, Harriet, with the proviso that after her death the residue of the estate was to go for the construction of the recreational center.

Mrs. Hovey died recently and the Middlesex Probate Court has ordered the terms of the will carried out.

PETITIONS COURT

The original will named five trustees for the fund and when the money became available on the death of Mrs. Hovey, four of those named as trustees had died. The fifth trustee declined to serve.

The administrator of Hovey's estate, Atty. Charles F. Stone, petitioned the court for the appointment of five new trustees, who will build and manage the recreational building.

The court has now approved the appointment of the five trustees and it is expected that the project will now be carried out as planned by Hovey. One of the men named as trustee is Edwin Reinhold Goransen, who was chauffeur for Mrs. Hovey up to the time of her death and who rceived a $25,000 legacy from her.

WOMEN BARRED

He was recommended for the post by Mrs. Hovey, the petition stated. The other trustees appointed are Judge John M. Gibbs, Alexander R. Smith, Jr., Charles W. Potter and Fred H. Kirwin.

Although women are prohibited specifically from sharing in any of the benefits of the fund left by Hovey, they were taken care of by his wife, who left her home and a large sum of money to maintain it as a temporary home for Waltham women who may not be able to care for themselves.

The foundation provided for by her husband will be known as the Hamblin L. Hovey Institute. It will be free to all men residents of the city of Waltham.

Arresting Officers Must Prosecute

Following the expressed desire of Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster of the municipal court, Police Commissioner Wilson ordered that all prisoners arrested for drunkenness who do not indicate that they will plead guilty to the charge, be prosecuted by policemen who arrest them.

Hitherto drunkenness case prisoners were prosecuted by officers on police vans which took them to the station house instead of the patrolman making the arrest.

HUB SCHOOLS COST $48,490 A DAY

It cost $48,490 a day to operate the public schools in Boston during the first 11 months of the present year, according to figures presented to the Boston school committee by Business Manager Alexander M. Sullivan.

The agent reported that during the first 11 months, which included two months of vacation, the total expenditures amounted to $13,095,591.08 for all items under control of the school committee.

At the meeting a delegation of women from Brighton were assured by the committee that proposed changes in the plans of the Brighton high school which has been authorized, would not hold up construction work and the building would be ready to be placed in service a year from next fall.

SEES NO DELAY

It developed in the discussion of the Brighton high school plans that $100,000 has already been expended in the preparation of the plans. The building, as planned at present, looks like a medieval castle, according to Committeeman Joseph J. Hurley.

Chairman Francis C. Gray, after routine business had been disposed of, stated that the school committee, "is in favor of the schoolhouse commission proceeding on the plans, except that the school committee requests that the auditorium be modified" and that the location of the music room be placde in the lobby, in accordance with the views of the board of survey, made known at a conference last week between the mayor, school board, survey board and the schoolhouse commission.

"Will this change cause any appreciable delay in the completion of the school?" asked Mrs. Charles G. Andrews. Chairman Gray thought there would not be any further delay. A year from next fall is set as the time when the school will be completed, Chairman Gray revealed.

DECIDED A CHANGE

Committeeman Hurley then said: "The school committee appropriates the money, but neither individually nor collectively has it anything to do with the drawing of the plans. It looks to me that this building, from a perusal of the plans, will resemble a medieval castle. I am voting for the plans because I think the citizens of Brighton have waited so long and that these plans have cost about $100,000.

Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron of the committee, herself a resident of Brighton, declared that the survey committee has decided on the change.

New Death Laid to Furnace Tragedy

Lake Bluff, Ill., Dec. 18—Excitement during the investigation of the death of Miss Elfrieda Knaak, who was burned in the furnace of the village hall, was attributed as a cause in the death of Barney Rosenhagen, former chief of police. Rosenhagen died of heart trouble. The furnace case is believed to have aggravated his ailment.

HOOVER ON WAY TO BRAZIL FOR LAST VISIT

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 18 (AP)—Turning the far corner of his Latin-American trip, Herbert Hoover today boarded the U. S. S. Utah for Rio Janeiro, where he will spend three days before beginning his long homeward voyage.

Brazil has prepared an extensive program for the President-elect as farewell to the goodwill tour which carried him more than 10,000 miles into the other half of America.

Concluding his visit to Uruguay, Mr. Hoover carried from this republic deep impressions of its desire to contribute to the peace of the Americas. He gave earnest expression of these impressions in an exchange of speeches with President Campisteguy at a farewell banquet which was attended by a distinguished company of Uruguayans and Americans.

SPIRIT OF PEOPLE

Mr. Hoover said Uruguay demonstrated that the moral weight of nations is not based upon size or numbers, but upon the spirit and character of a people. Uruguay is thus an example of the profound political truth that national greatness springs from the heights and depths of the national soul.

Leading Americans of Central and South America who have been following the progress of the Hoover tour, believe its result will be incalculable in promoting friendship. Some of those in various countries visited who came in closest contact with Mr. Hoover in his dealings with the various officials, said he showed an unusual facility in grasping each local situation.

This was regarded as especially true in reference to relations between North and South America. Mr. Hoover's ability to present the various viewpoints which apparently served to remove misunderstanding also was praised.

LEAVES XMAS EVE

After leaving Rio Janeiro on Christmas eve, Mr. Hoover will decide his future itinerary. Apparently he has decided to eliminate some West Indian stops which were originally planned and possibly Havana will be excluded from the return voyage.

Mr. Hoover was believed to be anxious to get to Florida for conference with party leaders on the makeup of his cabinet. He also was thought to be anxious to make plans for his own administration, including the tasks to be set for the special session of the new Congress which is to be called primarily for the solution of the farm relief problem.

Autopsy on Body of Taunton Woman

Taunton, Dec. 18—An autopsy on the body of Mrs. Agnes Madder, 28, of 324 Middleboro ave., who died at the Morton Hospital, was held at undertaking parlors by Dr. Charles A. Atwood, medical examiner, assisted by Dr. Andrew J. McGraw, assistant medical examiner, and Dr. Joseph Murphy. The report was forwarded to Dist. Atty. William C. Crossley. State Detective Francis W. Clemmey is in charge of the investigation.

Catherine E. Kimball, 34, of Plymouth st., Carver, is under arrest charged with performing an illegal operation on Mrs. Madder. Joseph Vieira, 20, of 2 Battle row, East Taunton, is charged with being an accessory before the fact. They will appear in district court on December 24.

Fears for Life of Prussian Grand Duke

Antibes, France, Dec. 18 (AP)—while latest reports from the bedside of Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, who is making a gallant fight against pneumonia, mentioned a slight improvement today, it was feared that this was only temporary, because of the age of the patient. He is 72.

The grand duke has made France his home since the Russian revolution and as head of the Romanoff family he has been deeply engaged in plans for the restoration of the imperial Russian house.

Dog Chews Clothes of College Girls

South Hadley, Dec. 18—The senior class of Mt. Holyoke College has been reduced to tatters. The girls this morning awoke to find their caps and gowns pulled to shreds, the work of a playful dog that had been befriended by the students.

The room in which the wearing apparel is kept was a wreck and now the girls have placed a ban on all homeless dogs.

Killed by Shotgun in House Accident

Cranston, R. I., Dec. 18 (AP)—Shot through the abdomen when he accidentally knocked over a shotgun in a dark closet, Harold Steele, 31, garage owner, of Garden st., died almost instantly.

Steele had gone to his room for the night and was groping for some clothing when he hit the gun, which fell and exploded. A charge of fine shot entered his body.

'THE GAMBLERS' TO BE FILMED AS A TALKIE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1928, by Universal Service

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18—The talkies, bless them, are causing more upsets in the Hollywood studios than anything that has happened since Thomas Edison discovered the movies. "Young Sinners," starring Buddy Rogers and featuring Ruth Taylor, was all cast and ready to go into production at the Paramount studios when suddenly it did not seem feasible as a talkie.

Without further parley it was shelved and "Close Harmony" substituted, with Buddy Rogers and Nancy Carroll in the leading roles. "Close Harmony" is from the pen of Elsie Janis and Gene Market and it's a stage story with a plot and a chance for singing and dancing. Skeets Gallagher, brought back from New York, will team with Jack Oakie for the song and dance numbers and John Cromwell, with a long list of stage productions back of him, will direct.

What happened to the little blonde, Ruth Taylor? She plays a featured part in "Wild Party" opposite Clara Bow and this incidentally marks her debut as well as that of Clara, college boys delight, into the realm of the sound pictures. Jack Ludin also has been added to the cast of "Wild Party."

YOU may safely count Warner Brothers in on any dramatic plays of yesterday. They are all set for any of these old-time stage plays that have achieved success on Broadway and are now available for the talkies. "The Gamblers," which was made by Vitagraph some years ago, will be brought out shortly. It's good, too, for the talkies, even though it has already been done as a movie.

John Bowers and Lois Wilson have seen signed to play the leading roles and Warners must feel it has possibilities, for they have assigned Michael Curtiz to direct it. They are probably right, for everyone of these dramas go over with a bang when given synchronization and dialogue. One gets bewildered at the number of plays that suddenly pop up from nowhere become talkies over night.

THE new-fangled talkies will give the old-fashioned Christmas pageant a terrible run for its money. The first talkie of this kind to be brought to my attention is called "There Is a Santa Claus," written, directed and produced by Leigh Jason and Mark Sandrich.

The two young men made all the exteriors in New York with R. C. A. equipment, and it will be ready to be released Christmas week. It will be shown in Los Angeles at the United Artists Theater during the holidays. Frank Carpenter and Little Jimmy McCallion will play the leads, and we are told it's no steal from Dickens' "Christmas Carol."

JUST how many leading men are they going to have in "Through Different Eyes," Mary Duncan's next picture for Fox? Will some one be kind to me and answer the question? We have Joseph Schildkraut and Warner Baxter, now comes the word that Edmund Lowe will be co-featured with Mary Duncan in the leading male part. Talk about casts that ought to satisfy any actress. Eh, what?

IF the old brain had been working as well as it does sometimes I would have known when I saw Olive Tell coming out of the commissary at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios she was there on business. She certainly was, for she has been signed to play one of the important feminine parts in Norma Shearers' picture, "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Olive knows her theater, having been both on the stage and in pictures for many years.

HOLLYWOOD and Christmas were just too much for Hedda Hopper to resist. Although she has been playing in a New York production she will arrive here Christmas Eve to spend the holidays with her son, Bill.

Hedda narrowly escaped death when a papier mache airplane crashed to the stage, injuring severely two members of the company and landing so near her that she might had been said to have literally escaped by a hair's breadth. She should stay in Hollywood, where the airplanes are real and the only danger from them is falling some 2000 or 3000 feet.

WANDERING around the studios one hears this and that piece of gossip, all of interest in the film colony and most of it of interest to the outside world. Charles King, who was imported here for "The Broadway Melody," and who plays opposite Marion Davies in "The Five O'Clock Girl," has just signed a new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Ray Coffin, former publicity director for the Hal Roach studios, has resigned and is now at leisure. There is also a rumored resignation of Leo McCarey, Roach's supervising director. Gregory La Cava, having finished Corrine Griffith's picture, "Saturday's Children," will spend Christmas in New York and perhaps do a picture for himself there.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Gregory La Cava receiving the congratulation of his co-workers at First National upon winning a tennis cup. Marie Dressler entertaining the Count and Countess De Soro. Santa Claus driving down Hollywood boulevard in a wagon drawn by reindeers. He stopped traffic.

Raymond Hackett and his wife going on a Coca Cola spree between scenes of "The Trial of Mary Dugan."

SEE BENEFITS IN STOCKS CRASH

Washington, Dec. 18 (Universal)—The recent stock market breaks and fluctuations since are "believed to have strengthened business by bringing stock prices nearer to their intrinsic value," according to Secretary of Commerce William F. Whiting.

"Available statistics show that trade and industry generally are in record volume, with retail trade showing an expansion over recent months, due largely to the holiday demands," he said.

"Most of the basic industries for which statistics are available have been active throughout the entire year. Automobile production, estimating for the month of December, will doubtless exceed the previous high record of 1926, when 4,299,000 passenger cars and trucks were produced.

"Steel production during the year promises to increase over 1927, when the output totaled 43,041,000 tons. Available statistics indicate that the output of copper will advance over last year, when mine production amounted to 829,978 short tons."

Smith Bike Girls Are Banned From Sidewalks

Northampton, Dec. 18—Smith College students must do their bicycle riding in the highways and not on the sidewalks of the town Miss Constance S. Peterson of St. Louis, a sophomore at the college, was fined $5 for using the sidewalk while pedaling her way about town. Bicycle riding is the fad at Smith College.

Many are in dire need

MAROONED ON PEAK, DYING

Grenoble, France, Dec. 18—With his rescuers near enough to shout words of encouragement to him, it is feared that Jean Douboin, Lyons newspaperman, trapped by a storm on the heights of Helmit's Peak, will perish before help reaches him. His companion, Mlle. Yvonne Renoux, has already perished.

Rescuers worked their way, inch by inch, toward the marooned scribe, but when night came on they were forced to abandon their efforts. Douboin, who is married and has three children, called to rescuers that his feet and hands are frozen and that he cannot hope to withstand the intense cold and wind for many more hours.

End Banana Strike

Bogota, Colombia, Dec. 18—Dispatches from the banana growing region, where a recent strike precipitated numerous clashes, indicated the strike had been settled.

GOLD MAY MEND HER HEART

Raquel Albert Vielalon, Cuban movie actress, whose suit for $250,000 in heart balm from Jose Emanuel Cassanova, banker, may be settled out of court. She charges he tricked her into a mock marriage, then deserted her in New York. J. M. Wolff, former assistant United States attorney, is counsel for the beautiful senorita and admitted that southern breezes wafted to to his ears whispers of a contemplated settlement.

FLIERS ESCAPE WHEN FORCED TO LAND

Hadley Field, N. J., Dec. 18—The fate of two mail plane pilots, hours overdue from Bellefonte, Pa., was cleared up today following receipt of reports that one had landed near Suffield, Ct., and the other at Owego, N. Y.

J. O. Webster, the pilot who came down in Connecticut, jumped from his plane when the fuel supply was exhausted and he could find no place to land. He was reported uninjured, but his machine was wrecked. The landing of the second plane at Owego was said to have been without mishap. A low flying ceiling was said to have been responsible for both mishaps.

Webster's plane was seen to crash in a swamp in Manning's woods, Thompsonville, Ct., a quarter of a mile from the Massachusetts State line. Webster made a safe landing with a parachute on the other side of the Connecticut river, about a mile distant from where his plane landed.

At Owego, H. P. Little of Cleveland made a spectacular landing on top of a hill near here when his plane ran out of fuel. He brought his machine, loaded with 1000 pounds of air mail, to a safe landing with the aid of two flares. Little said that the low ceiling caused him to get off his course and he found himself 200 miles off the route when his gas supply became exhausted. He expressed the opinion that he had flown clear to the Atlantic coast and circled back until when near here, a "hole" in the clouds beneath him enabled him to sight the hill and bring his machine down.

Bag Big Brewery

Millville, Dec. 18—Beer and brewing equipment valued at $10,000 were seized at one of the largest breweries ever uncovered in this section of the state on the farm of Fabien Jodoin.

'Bad Art' Baneful to Life, Says Cram

"BAD art," says Ralph Adams Cram, America's foremost authority on ecclesiastical architecture, "works powerfully for bad living and bad thinking. Good art is in its very nature regenerative and beneficent, and architecture with all the arts, is the God-given language of religion.

"The blackest period of artistic depravity," he declared, "came between 1830 and 1880, and it was at the end of this unfortunate period that one of those abominable open competitions was held to obtain plans and designs for the building of St. John the Divine, in New York city."

Ralph A. Cram

The New England Women's club, dean of them all, held the first of a series of luncheons in the Hotel Kenmore, with the president, Mrs. Frank G. Wren, presiding. Over 200 people attended Mr. Cram's illustrated lecture on the great cathedral.

He told us that the opportunity which gave him the greatest scope along architectural lines came in 1911, when the firm of Cram & Ferguson was called upon to go on with the work of the cathedral. The more mature man was glad his plans (submitted many years before) had been turned down, for he realized they were not good.

TELLS OF SCULPTURES

Correcting the statement that this will be the third largest cathedral in the world, Mr. Cram declares it will be the largest. Strictly speaking, he says, St. Peter's in Rome is not a cathedral, it is the private chapel of the Pope.

One may get some idea of the vastness of St. John the Divine when told that Bunker Hill monument could be set up in the center of the transept, with 15 feet to spare; and the bride on her journey from the door to the altar will walk a distance of a tenth of a mile.

Exquisite details of John Angel's sculptures were thrown on the screen; Mr. Cram believes this man's work is the finest that has been produced in 400 years.

The cathedral is being constructed entirely of masonry; New York building commissioners have nearly gone into hysterics over the seemingly impossible architectural and engineering feats that have been accomplished. Labor organizations are trying to raise enough money to complete one of the porches, the other, it is hoped, the "Marine Porch," will be a monument to the men who go down to the sea in ships.

WOMEN AID

Sixteen great bays at a cost of $150,000 have been subscribed for by groups of people working at every profession in the world. The work has been held up in the men's transept owing to lack of money, while the women, Mr. Cram says, saved them at a critical time, with their contribution of $85,000.

"Now comes the question—'When is it going to be completed?' If sufficient money were forthcoming it could be finished in a comparatively short time," Mr. Cram says. "The total cost will be approximately $30,000,000. This means a vast sum of money, but if we can spend $45,000,000 on an airplane carrier that will last not longer than 40 years, the object of which is the destruction of life, surely we ought to be able to spend this amount on a building for the conservation of life, both here and in the hereafter, a building that will last longer than the pyramids!"

PLAN TO FLY 10 DAYS, NON-STOP

Washington, Dec. 18—All existing records for sustained flight of a heavier than air machine are expected to go far into oblivion immediately after the first of the year, when the United States Army plans to keep a plane in the air for 10 days, if possible.

The plane, christened The Question Mark, will be refuelled in the air, while the crew of five aboard will take turns at the controls. The cabin of the plane is fitted with bunks.

The flight has been authorized by the War Department for the purpose of testing the strain that the human system can sustain in protracted flight.

The flight also is designed to investigate the practical value of refueling airplanes while in the air, from a military as well as a commercial standpoint. Initial tests on the air refueling were consummated here successfully.

Two army planes flew with about a score of feet separating them and both at a speed of 80 miles an hour, while 50 gallons of gasoline was transferred in less than a minute through a hose from one machine to the other.

After this test Secretary Davis authorized the endurance flight, which will be dependent upon this method of obtaining fuel. The Question Mark will start on its transcontinental flight to the Pacific Coast from here today, accompanied by two refueling planes, making five stops en route.

For the endurance experiment five of the Army's best airmen have been selected. They are Maj. Spatz, Capt. Ira Eaker, Lieut. Elwood R. Quesada and H. A. Halverson, all of them pilots, and Sergt. Roy Hooe, an expert mechanic.

The Question Mark plane, an Atlantic C-2, is equipped with three J-5 air-cooled engines of 220 horsepower each and is capable of a cruising speed of 115 miles an hour. The plane is equipped with bunks and a small electric stove, and carries radio telephone equipment.

Low Premium Will Not Be Opposed

It was learned at the State House that an unusual situation has developed regarding the insurance premium which shall be paid for the remainder of this year by the 40,000 persons insured under the compulsory automobile liability insurance law with the Car Owners' Mutual Insurance Company, recently declared insolvent.

Acting State Insurance Commissioner Linnell says he cannot authorize the insurance companies to charge less than the minimum of $5 prescribed by the manual, but in view of the extraordinary situation, he would raise no objection if any of the companies saw fit to charge less than the minimum.

Only Ten Days Work on Leviathan

Washington, Dec 18—Award to the Boston Navy Yard of the over haul job on the steamship Leviathan, which is [illegible] to go to Boston in J[illegible] for that purpose, seems destined to prove a somewhat hollow triumph for Boston, [illegible] after stiff competition from Norfolk.

It now appears that the Leviathan work will not require more than a week or 10 days at the yard. The reconditioning work on the George Washington, a sister ship of the United States lines, which at one stage of the negotiations was tentatively assigned to the Boston yard, but which is now going elsewhere, is a three months' job.

of finding happiness at Christmas time is—Santa Claus.

That is where the Goodfellows come in—and many have volunteered thus far. Just as many others are needed, however. If they cannot serve, they can send donations to the Goodfellow Editor.

MANY OTHER CASES

The case of the little Roxbury girl is numbered 32, for identification. Here are some other typical cases, also numbered for identification

33—South Boston: Mother and six children ask any aid; father has been ill three years; would prefer a Christmas dinner.

34—South End: Four children whose father has been dead 10 years; getting some State aid; wish warm clothing—or "anything."

35—Roxbury: Seven children aged 14 down to 1½ years have no adequate shoes or warm clothing, cold at night because of lack of bedclothing; three in family have died and burial fees still owing; letter is from the 14-year-old girl.

36—South End. Mother with three boys, one girl; husband working only periodically; need clothing and a Christmas dinner.

37—South Boston: Woman, all alone. Work is slack and she needs food. Says, "As for clothes, I can get along."

If you want to be a Goodfellow for one or more families, write immediately to the Goodfellow Editor of the Boston Evening American and fill out the blank published with this article. State if you wish the district of Boston, or any city, or the section of a town in which you would like to be a Goodfellow.

IT'S GETTING LATE

The Goodfellow Editor will then send you the names and letters of the needy and you can have the hearty satisfaction of learning what is needed, buying it yourself and delivering it, too.

If you cannot give the time to the buying and delivering, the Goodfellow Editor will be glad to attend to it just for you.

Write today to the Goodfellow Editor, Boston Evening American, Winthrop sq., Boston. Tell him what you wish to do, what size family or families you wish to provide for and he will forward one or more of the pathetic letters of appeal that he is receiving every day from those who deserve.

Prince George Jogs Around Ship and Works in Gym

Aboard the S. S. Berengaria, Dec. 18—Passengers aboard this liner bound for England, are very much interested in the methods and manners in which their royal fellow passenger, Prince George, keeps in condition, despite his anxiety over the illness of his father. The sight of the prince taking a three-mile jog around the promenade deck, and spending a half hour at a time in vigorous exercises in the gymnasium, gives ample evidence of his desire to keep fit.

17th Century Chest Is Sold for $4500

Middletown, Ct., Dec. 18 — The heirlooms handed down by Col Joseph E. Cove, of Revolutionary War fame were auctioned off in Portland by John M. Mitchell of Greenwich. Among the antiques was a rare Connecticut sunflower chest which was sold to John Tyman of this city, who was said to be buying for William [illegible] also of this city. The chest brought $4500. There is one like it in the Metropolitan Museum in New York city. The chest dated back to 1600-1680.

HELD AS POISON SUSPECT

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Dec. 18—Mrs Norah Edwards, 37, is under arrest here charged with attempting to kill by poison her third husband, J. W. Edwards, who is in a critical condition.

Prosecuting Atty Byron Kearbey is investigating the deaths of her two other husbands, Fred Padgett and A. X. Harris, a stepson, Forrest Edwards, 16, and a daughter, all of whom died under mysterious circumstances.

The stepson died three months ago. The husband became ill about two months ago. His condition grew worse and he was taken to a St. Louis hospital.

He told doctors he was confident that his wife had administered poison to him and had poisoned his son, Forrest.

5 to 10 Years for Slaying Sweetheart

New York, Dec. 18—Mrs. Marlyse Mive, former French war nurse was sentenced by Judge Cohn to 5 to 10 years in Auburn prison for the s[illegible] of her sweetheart, Andrew Iasoa.

2 WOMEN FIGHT FOR ESTATE OF HUB BIGAMIST

Brockton, Dec. 18—The question of settling an estate, claimed by two women, one of whom admits she was the bigamous wife of the other's husband, is facing Judge Chamberlain in the probate court here today.

The husband was Thomas S. Powell, former sergeant of the Boston & Albany Railroad police, and the two women are contesting the $4,000 estate left by Powell.

One of the women, who had seven children by the railroad policeman, is Mrs. Delia Powell of Newcastle, Pa. She claims she was deserted by Powell in 1908, the year he went to Boston to take up his railroad police duties.

ASKS REMOVAL

The other woman, who admits that she is a bigamous widow, is Mrs. A[illegible] A. (Mullin) Powell of East Sixth st., South Boston. She was one [illegible] named administratrix of the estate and the action now is for her removal as administratrix and opposition to her petition for fees as administratrix.

Mrs. Mullin Powell was on the witness stand for some time and testified to marrying Powell in Boston on March 1, 1916. She said that she believed he was a widower and not until some years later did the truth come out.

She told Judge Chamberlain that when she questioned him regarding his former marriage he became insane and finally had to be taken to the Taunton Insane Hospital, where he died.

NEVER DIVORCED

The other Mrs. Powell told of her marriage on July 21, 18[illegible] and produced a marriage certificate to prove it. She said she lived with Powell 23 years before he deserted her in 1908. There was never any divorce, she said. She came here from Newcastle to lay claim to his estate, she said.

The estate consists of $900 in postal savings and a deposit of $[illegible] in a Boston Savings bank. There is also a piece of real estate in Abington bought, according to records, by Powell and his [illegible].

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and these are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

ONE GIRL DIES, ANOTHER HURT IN ACCIDENTS

Randolph, Dec. 18—One little girl is dead, and another is dying as a result of two accidents within an hour of each other on North Main st. here.

The death was that of Virginia Clark, eight years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Clark of Stafford lane, Brockton, who was on a visit to her aunt, Mrs. Cattie [illegible] [illegible] of Mill st. Although the child was accompanied by her aunt on a shopping trip, she crossed North Main st., near the Randolph Trust Company building alone.

The car which struck her was owned and operated by Lawrence M. Dodds of 142 Menomet st., Brockton, who said he did not see the girl until his machine struck her. The child was carried to a nearby [illegible] [illegible] the accident, but died [illegible] [illegible] from a fractured skull.

[illegible] an hour before the accident [illegible] [illegible], daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Proctor of [illegible] North Randolph, was crossing North Main st. at West st. when she was hit by a truck owned by the Standard Oil Company and operated by Emile G. Cone of 194 Howard st., Brockton. The operator of the truck said that he did not see the child until after the truck had struck her.

The girl was taken to the Brockton Hospital where her name is on the danger list. She is suffering from concussion of the brain, shock, dislocation of the left hip and other injuries. She is not expected to live.

Policeman's Quick Work Saves Woman

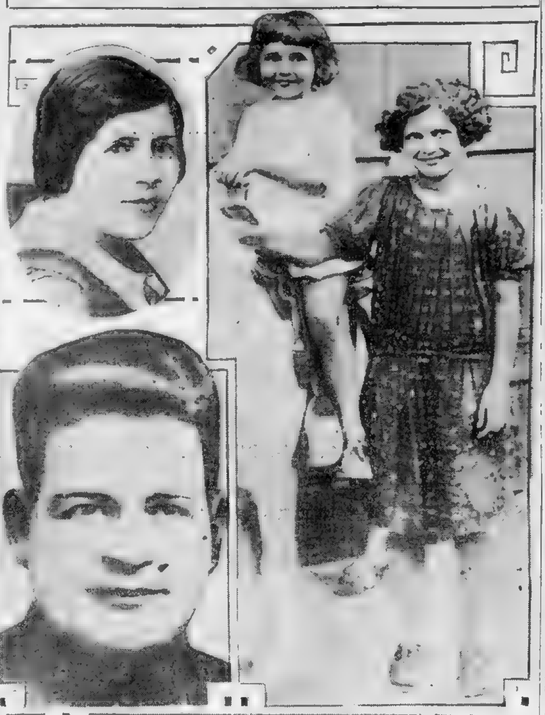
Mrs. Mary Chiplitsky, wife of John Chiplitsky of 475 South st., Quincy, owes her life to the prompt action of motorcycle officer James H. "Two-Gun" Baker, who applied first aid remedies after she had taken poison by mistake at her home. Baker heard the woman's cries and rushed into the house. On learning of the trouble he administered treatment and put in a call for an ambulance.

Christmas Wreath Stolen From Door

Capt. F. D. Sharp, coach of the Harvard polo team, reported to Cambridge police that a thief stole the Christmas wreath from the door of his home at 59 Brattle st.

"If some person wanted a wreath that bad I would have bought one for him," he said, "but I think it's a shame to take it after I spent a long time hanging it up just so."

ASK SANTA TO BRING DADDY BACK



Frances Pierce Claire Pierce

Clarence A. Pierce, a World War veteran and longshoreman of Barrett ave., South Boston, has been missing from home since December 1 and his wife and children hope Santa will guide him back home before Christmas Day. He had sought work in vain for several days before he disappeared.

When Santa Claus squeezes his way down the chimney of the home of Frances Pierce, 8, of Barrett ave., South Boston, on Christmas eve he won't bring happiness to her and her two sisters, Claire, 11, and Sheila, eight weeks old, unless he brings their missing daddy with him.

Their father, Clarence A. Pierce, a World War veteran and longshoreman, disappeared from his home on December 1 after he was laid off from work the day before Thanksgiving.

He kept the news of the loss of work from his wife until after Thanksgiving Day so that the day would not be spoiled for his family. Then he began his search for work and met failure on each try and became discouraged.

On Saturday morning, December 1, he started out as usual a little before 7 o'clock to continue his search for work. He kissed his wife goodbye and then crept softly over to the sleeping forms of Claire and Frances and kissed their cheeks. Then softly to the crib of the sleeping infant, he crept and kissed her good bye.

His family has not seen or heard from him since. He is 36 years old, 5 feet, 7½ inches tall, and weighs about 174 pounds. When he left home he wore a pair of blue trousers, a heavy blue sweater, a gray felt hat and a pair of black low cut shoes.

MRS. CUTLER WINS DIVORCE IN RENO

Roger W. Cutler, wealthy society man, broker and Harvard athlete, who sank a German submarine in the North Sea during the World War, has been sunken himself in the sea of matrimony by a court in Reno, Nev., which has granted a divorce to his wife, Mrs. Leslie Bradley Cutler.

Mrs. Cutler, heiress to the Bradley fertilizer millions, secured the divorce on the simple grounds of desertion and she was also granted custody of the four children of the couple.

News of the divorce was somewhat of a shock to Beacon Hill and Brookline social circles where for many years Cutler and his wife were popular. Mrs. Cutler, before her marriage was a member of the Vincent Club, the Chilton Club and other exclusive organizations.

Cutler, who graduated from Harvard in 1911, was captain of the crew and left an enviable record for his work as an oarsman. The marriage, which was a brilliant social affair, occurred a year after Cutler graduated.

During the World War Cutler served as a naval aviator and here too, he made an enviable record. He is officially credited with sinking a German submarine while on patrol in a seaplane.

The Cutlers lived on a magnificent estate, The Ledges, in Needham where Mrs. Cutler displayed intense interest in social service and child welfare problems and was active in the affairs of the Unitarian Church.

Baldwin Moves to Assist Sufferers

London, Dec. 18—Prime Minister Baldwin asked Parliament to approve at once an appropriation of $453,000 to assist in removing families from conditions of dire suffering in distressed mining areas.

The premier's proposal was the government plan to assist in a nation-wide campaign by public and private interests to aid the families of more than 300,000 unemployed miners. Greatest suffering has been reported officially in the closed mining areas.

The government plan would provide funds to aid the miners in removing their families to other districts where they may be able to find employment.

Alleged Hit-Run Driver Is Taken

Stepping from the curb on Chelsea st., Charlestown, to board a street car, Thomas F. O'Malley, 39, was struck down by a machine which sped off following the accident.

Another machine gave chase and while passing through Chelsea the passenger pointed out the fleeing machine to a police sergeant who immediately took charge of the pursuit. The suspect was overtaken and brought back to Station 15. The police will interview witnesses of the accident before bringing charges. O'Malley was treated at the Chelsea Naval Hospital for minor injuries.

Phone Company's Capital Increased

Heath, Dec. 18—The stockholders of the Heath Telephone Company at a meeting voted to change the name of the corporation to the Western New England Telephone Co. They also voted to increase the capital stock from $108,000 to $208,000. The new capital will be used for new equipment and extension of lines.

The company serves Ashfield, Charlemont, Heath, Shelburne Falls and the Vermont towns of Jacksonville, Readsboro and Wilmington.

THIEVES LOOT DORCHESTER HOME

Just when the Dorchester police were convinced they had "rounded up" a gang of thieves guilty of a long series of crimes in that district, their entire force of patrolmen was ordered out to hunt and [illegible] the robbers who ransacked a home on Lyons st., Dorchester, smashing valuable furniture.

This last crime, police admitted, was the worst of the series. Whether it could be laid to boys police said they were not certain. In the arrests of five youths last week, they had believed that the crimes were ended.

The Lyons st. building home of William H. Brown and his niece, Miss Ruth Brown, was not only robbed of jewelry and cash to the total value of more than $[illegible], but was the scene of vandalism hitherto unheard of in Dorchester, police said.

Fingerprints were taken today. A clue regarded as important was furnished by nearby residents, who declared that for the past few days mysterious telephone calls have been received in the district. The calls were all alike. The telephone rang and when the owners answered they were told by the operator that the persons calling had hung up. The police think the robbers used this means to make sure that those who might observe them at work would be out when they entered the Brown home.

When Brown returned from work he found the flat in the greatest disorder. The kitchen door had been hacked open with an axe and the screen door had also been forced open.

Pictures had been torn from the walls, the furniture tumbled about, the bed clothing had been tossed about the rooms, while in the guest room a highly valuable heirloom, a pineapple bureau, had been hacked with an axe. The drawers had been pulled out and the contents strewn about the room.

There were many cigarette butts and in places the butts had been allowed to burn on the edge of nicely polished furniture.

The loot included a gold watch, chain and charm valued at $[illegible]; four gold stickpins valued at $30; $[illegible] in cash, several gold rings valued at $[illegible], two $5 gold pieces, a bank book and Christmas club bank book, new winter coat at $50, smaller pieces of jewelry and clothing valued at $[illegible].

The two $5 gold pieces Miss Brown had received as early Christmas presents and the rings were prized more than their worth because they had been in the family for many years. Her new suitcase was apparently used by the robbers in which to take away the loot.

Franklin Medal Found by Girl

A Franklin medal awarded to J. A. Lamson for brilliant work in high school 86 years ago, has been found by a little East Boston girl. She is anxious that the owner have it back. The medal was found by Evelyn McMasters, 1[illegible] years old, of 431 Frankfort st., East Boston, several days ago while on her way home from the John Cheverus school. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. McMasters. On the back of the medal is the inscription: "Reward of merit by the school committee, 1842, to J. A. Lamson."

JUNIOR LEAGUERS TO SELL CHRISTMAS GREENS TOMORROW, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

GIRLS HOLD SALE OF WREATHS AT 251 BEACON STREET

VERSATILE AND MANY FACETED, THE JUNIOR LEAGUER tomorrow wreathes her always merry countenance with its most engaging smile as she presides as saleslady in a mise en scene of fragrant holiday greenery fresh from hillside fastnesses. It is the occasion of the league's annual sale, so fill well your purses, Mesdames et Messieurs, before you descend on No. 251 Beacon st. tomorrow morning, where all this Christmas wealth is set out for sale.

DELECTABLE DEBUTANTES, OLDER GIRLS OF ASSURED belledom and the chic young matrons turn to the task gaily—each knows her way about perfectly when it comes to disposing of anything from toothpicks to totem poles for good, substantial dollars. Tomorrow's sale antedates by a scant twenty-four hours the house to house canvass when the Junior Leaguers go merrily up and down the smart thoroughfares disposing of their wares, with a truck or two in attendance piled up with trees, miniature and fully grown, and wreathes.

MISS DIANA LEE-WARNER AND MISS RUTH LYMAN WERE the two debutantes faithful to promise yesterday morning, of serving at No. 48 Rutland st., where the Folk Handicrafts set out their bright wares and did a thriving trade. Other debutantes more dilatory the first day but who will serve sometime during the ensuing week until Christmas are Miss Margaret Cummings, Miss Edith and Miss Mary Eustis and Miss Eleanor Perry—that is, if they can subtract themselves from the festal hours the debutante calendar calls for this holiday week.

AS CHRISTMAS DEPARTS INTO THE LIMBO OF YESTERDAYS and New Year's flares its lights across the 1929 horizon cards go into the mail for Richard Platt's "First and Third Wednesdays," when music is the chef d'oeuvre and tea the concluding rite of informal afternoons at the Platt establishment in Lime st. Bachelor menages there are in abundance, scattered about "The Hill" and through that London-like section of quiet thoroughfares lying so secluded and placid at its foot. But none more genuinely interesting than is Mr. Platt's.

AFTERNOONS WITH MUSIC IN HIS SPACIOUS STUDIO punctuate the New Year's opening months pleasantly for those who delight in chamber concerts. Sometimes it is a former pupil of Mr. Platt's who performs at the pianoforte. Sometimes it is Mr. Platt himself, and all too infrequently, who plays, and when that felicitous afternoon arrives usually it is Harrison Kellar or perhaps Heinrich Gebhardt who co-stars with Mr. Platt on the program. Then are encores much in demand and the tea hour likely to approach the dinner hour so lengthy does the afternoon become.

TODAY THE DEBUTANTE FITS A SMART LUNCHEON INTO the crowded hours and feasts at the Ritz-Carlton in honor of Miss Peggy Leland and Miss Phyllis Ellsworth, and as guest of Mrs. John N. Stevens. Last evening the Just Out coterie set its feet to syncopated rhythm and danced at the Copley-Plaza. Miss Jane Garfield figured as the bud of the occasion, with Mr. and Mrs. Irving Garfield the hosts. An usher staff made up of kinsmen, in part, served for the dance and was entertained beforehand at the Somerset Club.

GARDNER EMMONS WORE THE RED CARNATION AS HEAD usher and his white-carnationed assistants were two Parkinson sons, John and Nathaniel; James Crocker, Arthur Weekes, Wilson Lloyd, George Brewster, John Swann, Horace Fuller, John Grew, Grenville Ulman, Henry Richardson, Whitney Stone, Walter Hardie, William Hutton and Robert Bishop. Another festivity of the dinner variety was the Honorable Moorfield Storey's for Miss Susan Moller, a much-feted bud on this year's list

BOSTON'S ELITE PLAYS SANTA CLAUS TO THE MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS right through the year. No matter what the season, whether it is Kris Kringle's time of generosity, or the salubrious midsummer when society scatters to the four winds, the way is never too far nor the day too crowded to "remember" the museum. Presenting a very choice "something" is a pastime the artistic and the plutocratic indulge in, especially now that the New Wing for Decorative Arts is actually the thing of visible beauty everyone expected it to be.

MRS. FELTON'S GIFT IS A PAINTING BY TINTORETTO; Mrs. Crosby's name will ornament the gift card on some exquisite French porcelains and Mrs. Kidder's contribution to museum treasures is a Persian rug. Mrs. Hale's gift is an example of Sardinian weaving, Edward Perry Warren donated a statuette and some fragments of ivory and marble ornaments. Mr. Holmes' present enrichment of the museum store is something in the decorative arts, an Italian architectural detail, making probably more than a score of gifts that gentleman has given his beloved institution.

PRINCELY IN THEIR MUNIFICENCE AND EXQUISITE IN taste—the gifts range from entire salons of Louis XVI delicacy to porcelains and paintings. Recent additions to the museum's beauties have come through the generosity of Mrs. Cornelius Conway Felton, Mrs. Stephen Van Rensselaer Crosby, Mrs. Richard Walden Hale, Mrs. Henry Perkitt Kidder, Miss Eleanor B. Kilham, John Ellerton Lodge, Edward Perry Warren and Edward Jackson Holmes. As the beloved director of Boston's treasury of art up in the Fenway Mr. Holmes figures prominently, just as he also figures frequently as donor of this and that priceless objet d'art.

AFGHAN QUEEN AND KING SAFE IN PALACE

London, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Afghan legation today stated it had received from Kabul denial of reports that King Amanullah and Queen Souriya had taken refuge in a fort after a revolt in the army caused by the westernizing reforms of the King and the Queen's desire to abolish seclusion of women.

The legation said the King and Queen were residing at their palace as usual and that all foreign legations and foreign subjects were absolutely safe.

No army revolt took place, the legation said, adding that the basis of the reports appeared to have been in a series of minor incidents [illegible] caused by a raid of a brigand chief on one of the suburbs of Kabul.

New Delhi, India, Dec. 18 (AP)—Wireless communication with Kabul, capital of Afghanistan, was completely interrupted today. No news had been received [illegible] since yesterday. Grave anxiety was felt here.

The air force was reported preparing for relief of the British legation at Kabul should the necessity arise.

Peshawar, India, Dec. 18 (AP)—Travelers arriving from Afghanistan today said martial law had been proclaimed in Kabul. Assemblies of more than five persons had been forbidden and a curfew order was being enforced. There were frequent arrests.

Suburban White House Bill Filed

Washington, Dec. 18—A country White House, surrounded by trees, fields, fences and animal life, but close enough to Washington to provide an accessible week-end haven for the President was sought in a bill introduced by Senator Fess, Ohio, Republican.

Senator Goff, West Virginia, Republican, introduced a bill authorizing $600,000 for a summer White House in West Virginia.

Strike Settled

Fall River, Dec. 17—Approximately 100 employes of the Bay State Silk Mills returned to work as the result of a settlement of a strike among the weavers employed at the plant.

Jessica Brown Marries Wealthy Englishman

London, Dec. 18 (INS)—Lady Northesk, formerly Miss Jessica Brown of Buffalo, N. Y., a Ziegfeld Follies beauty, was married here today to Vivian Cornelius, a wealthy young Englishman, and orary attache of the British embassy in Brussels.

The ceremony took place in the Prince's Row registry office. It was followed by a benedictory service in th eSavoy Chapel.

The bride was divorced from the Earl of Northesk by the Scottish courts at Edinburgh late in October and her engagement to Cornelius followed within a few days.

OFFICIALS WIN IN FIGHT FOR SALARIES

By order of the Revere City Council, City Solicitor Wendell P. Murray was today preparing court settlements which will brighten up Christmas for six city officials by awards ranging from $200 to more than $1600.

The council instrucuted Murray to withdraw the city's opposition to suits brought by the officials for salary which they were deprived of by a reduction decreed last April by Mayor John E. Walsh.

The beneficiaries are Albert J Brown, city clerk, $400; Ernest Archer, tax collector, $200; Robert M. Copeland, auditor, $700; Clarence E. Clisbee, assessor, $1630.92; Frank W. Farrell, assessor, $1530.92, and John M. Liset, chairman of the board of assessors, $1632.12.

The assessors refused to draw any of their pay after Mayor Walsh had reduced it and sued for their entire salaries at the original figure in Municipal Court, Boston.

$5,000,000 More Asked for Air Mail

Washington, Dec. 18—President Coolidge recommended to Congress that it make $5,000,000 available to the Postoffice Department to care for its fiscal year deficit, as estimated by Director Lord of the budget bureau.

The deficit outlook was attributed by the budget bureau, largely to the 100 per cent increase of air mail since the postage was reduced to five cents an ounce last August 1, along with the establishment of new air mail routes.

AMERICAN-BORN PRINCESS DIES IN LONDON

London, Dec. 18 (AP)—Princess Clara de Wildenberg Hatzefeldt died today. She was the former Clara M. Campbell, adopted daughter of Collis P. Huntington of New York

The Princess was the widow of a Prussian noble and had been living in England since the war.

She had been a society leader for many years and was considered one of the best dressed women in Europe. She was noted for her lavish entertainments at her country estate near Windsor.

It was learned yesterday that the Princess was suffering from bronchitis, which she contracted a week ago, and was threatened with pneumonia.

League Finds Peace Moves Rather Costly

Geneva, Dec. 18—The dispute between Paraguay and Bolivia has given the treasury of the League of Nations a hard jolt. When all bills for the recent cabling of official documents to all members of the league and to non-member states in the western hemisphere had been totalled up today, it was found that the cost was $26,000 instead of the $6000 which had been previously estimated as the total.

Dolly Girl's Divorce Is Again Rumored

Paris, Dec. 18—A theatrical rumor had it that Roszika Dolly, of the dancing Dolly sisters, was on the point of seeking a divorce here from her husband, Mortimer Davis, because Davis objected to her desires to return to the stage. The couple have lived apart most of the time since their return from Deauville last summer.

The Age-Old Game of Making Love

What Has Happened So Far

Ralph Lessing, brilliant young barrister who has been too busy climbing the ladder of success to keep in practise for the frivolities of society, flees from a dinner party at the ornate Newport home of a millionaire client and friend to escape embarrassment. On the veranda of the Casino he meets a stockingless flapper and dances with her. After their dance he kisses her. She slips away from him, telling him she will come back. He waits two hours for her. Then, angry as much at his sense of loss as at the girl's desertion, he starts back for the home of his host upon the cliffs.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER 2

ALTERNATELY he cursed and laughed as he climbed the hill from First Beach, where stood the Casino, to the Cliff walk that skirted the lawns of the estates that fronted the ocean. He cursed because the girl had not returned and he laughed because it mattered to him that she had not come back.

"To fix her lips," she had said and he, like a loveborn youth, had waited until long past the hour when sitting meant to make himself ridiculous. He had smoked a score of cigarettes as he stood there. Every time that a couple—probably seeking a secluded spot for the exchange of caresses—came near him, he had suffered an agony of embarrassment. They might be friends of that calloused young thing who had kissed and left him, sent by her to spy upon him, to note if, yokel-like, he still awaited her, and in their whispers as they retreated he seemed to hear mocking mirth.

Now, as he plodded upward, he hated her. Cheap, ill-bred little—he called her names that blistered his lips as he uttered them, and were recalled instantly. For his mood changed constantly.

Poor little thing! Out for an evening's innocent amusement and he had kissed her, frightened her away. He was a brute, a cruder mucker than any man she might have encountered in the Casino. He, who had been scornful of her, who had thought her advances cheapened her, had been scorned by her, and had cheapened himself by his own advances.

Then he would remember that she had returned his kiss, and his mood would harden. Cheap little—little—flapper. Paid for her dance with the coinage of her kind, and then disappeared. In a few more years, indifferent to the touch of strange men, she would pay with another coinage. . . . Faugh! The mere thought that his lips had touched hers sickened him. That kind of girl. . . .

But, little as he knew of girls, he knew people. Only doctors are given greater opportunities for the understanding of character than are granted to lawyers. He knew decency, honesty, when he encountered it. This girl possessed both those qualities.

"My God," he exclaimed, turning from the street to the Cliff Walk, "you'd think she was a client of mine, and I was scheming out her defense. She has no defense. A common—and fifteen years younger than I am. . . ."

There was a moon, a breeze, and a high tide. The rollers heaved and curled, and burst in gleaming foam upon the rocks below. Their spray, dashed high, filled the air with the curative odors of iodine. Hatless, as he reached the foot of the Careys' lawn Lessing stood for a moment, bathing in moonlight, spray, and scent that soothed the nerves.

Above the crash and gurgle of the waves sounded the merry notes of an orchestra. From this public walk where he stood, Lessing could see the great house, ablaze with light; and the lawn itself, acres in extent, was dotted with gay marquees, themselves illuminated. Only amid the trees, tall, broad-limbed monarchs that had been there before Newport was the resort of fashion, that might have been old when slavers put into the harbor on the other side of Bellevue ave., was there darkness. And this darkness was ever and again relieved by the tiny blaze of a match held to a cigarette.

Lessing chuckling cynically. Men—or women—did not stroll in the tree salons. Perchance here were couples exchanging caresses such as he and the unknown girl had given each other a couple of hours ago.

Suddenly he felt an urge to be of the party. He left the walk and started eagerly across the lawn. A group of natives, or tourists, or what-not, drawn here by the opportunity to glimpse from afar gayeties denied them, stared at his shadowy form as he trod grass forbidden to the public.

"Hey, feller," cried a voice, "nobody crashes the Careys' gates. You'll get the bums' rush——"

There was a friendly shadow a rod or two from the great stone steps that led from the wide veranda. In its shelter Lessing paused a moment. He saw the groups of beautifully gowned women and their cavaliers, dancing in the brilliantly lighted ballroom, or crossing the veranda on their way to the fortune tellers' booths set up in the tents outside. And there were Indian mystics and magicians, and a dozen other forms of entertainment in these marquees.

The Careys had thriftily combined charity with the amusement they offered their guests. A hospital would benefit by the fees paid for these tent-shows that rather cleverly aped the atmosphere of a small fair. Af-

"SUPER" SAVES WORKER IN FACTORY BLAST

SAY OUSTED CHIEF WAS 'FRAMED'

Wareham, Dec. 18—Friends of Elwell H. Smith, ousted chief of police of this town, today declared that revelations would soon be forthcoming that would "rock Wareham." They said their accusations would implicate prominent citizens in a huge liquor ring.

These friends charged that Smith had been "framed."

Meanwhile, Smith, with his counsel, J. Frank Kiernan, planned his defense for the trial Thursday in the district court on a charge of accepting marked money, the prosecutors being the State police.

Also, Smith and his lawyer made ready to demand a public hearing by the board of selectmen on the board's writ throwing Smith out of office. The former chief declares he will battle to the last ditch and that he "can lick the selectmen."

The bill of specifications accompanying the order of ouster, according to Kiernan, opened with the charge that Chief Smith accepted a sum of money from Alfred Ben David. The count charging insubordination alleged that within 30 days the chief said he did not have to do what the selectmen ordered done and that he could "lick" them if it came to a fight.

RECEIVES SYMPHONY RECORDS

Santa Claus, in the person of Mrs. Alvin T. Fuller, acting for the Victor Talking Machine Co., visited Serge Koussevitsky at the Oliver Ditson Co. offices yesterday with a package containing the first three records electrically made by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under his direction in 1917.

These records, played on the new electric Victor machine before a distinguished gathering of musicians and patrons of music, are a suite from "Petrouchka" and an excerpt from "Apollo [illegible]," both by Stravinsky, a close friend of Koussevitsky.

"The reproduction of "Petrouchka" is magnificent," declared Koussevitsky. "It lends itself especially well to recording because the construction of its instruments produces better tones than ensembles. I am delighted with the records."

William Armes Fisher, vice president of the Oliver Ditson Co., paid tribute to the "orchestra known all over the world" and its famous conductor "whose genius has built it to its present high peak of perfection," and spoke of the perfection which electrical recording has reached through the Victor Co.

'WAGES OF SIN' SOLE MOTIF IN GUILD PLAY, SAYS YOUNG

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE Theater Guild, now safely and contentedly tenanted at the Hollis, has changed its bill—but not its behavior. Once more a late curtain stirred up a measure of tedium for the early arrivals and again, with a trifling comedy, was a generous first-night audience worked up to a high pitch of exultation. For "Caprice," the retitled "Playing at Love," was neither deep nor inspiring. It blazed forth no message except, possibly, that the wages of sin may bob up at any moment in the sudden appearance of a 17-year-old son with the soul of a poet. That was more than a message—it was a warning.

THE CAST

Counselor Albert von Echardt	Alfred Lunt
A Delicate Lady	Geneva Harrison
Minna	Caroline Newcomb
The Doctor	Ernest Cossart
Clerk	Leonard Loan
Amalia	Lily Cahill
Ilsa von Ilsen	Lynn Fontanne
Robert	Douglass Montgomery

Lynn Fontanne

AS you viewed the author's adroit manipulation of rather commonplace characters, and compared it with the enlivening conduct of the Theater Guild's acting personnel, you were more than ever convinced that the matter of text may, on occasions, be submerged by the manner of interpretation. It was exactly that way at the Hollis. After all, isn't it the trifles that tickle us most? The author of the comedy, Sil-Vara, takes the extreme Continental view of domestic infelicity.

Out of this story emerges four people—rather quaint folk, if I must say it. There is the deserted mother with a bouncing boy of 17. She demanded no wedding ring but rather expected the father to send the boy to the university. Calmly, quite willingly, he assented, though he was about to take a wife. This introduced the fiancee, who, on first glance, seemed more like a sweetheart than a good prospect in matrimony. The philandering male and the conservatory-raised son completed the quartet.

If there was any plan in the mind of Sil-Vara it must have been to extol the fluffy lady of wandering and doubtful morality at the expense of the woman outraged. For the wrong was never righted; there was no atonement. The play ended where it started; mother ran off with her boy and father opened his arms to the new paramour. As in "The Guardsman," Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne were pilot and first mate of the craft. Serenely they moved into their new roles delightfully they acted them.

BESET WITH PITFALLS

In Lily Cahill, as the deserted mother, the performance had the benefit of a talent matured by many stirring roles of the past decade, the authority of experience. Douglass Montgomery was the boy, a difficult role, beset with pitfalls. That he escaped them all and turned in a remarkably impressive performance, is one of the best reasons for recommending "Caprice" to those who enjoy quiet, subtle humor. There were no trumpet blasts of fun in "Caprice" but you found it continually prodding at your funny bone.

There was one novelty, at least, in "Caprice." The master of the lodgings did not, in his repeated vexations, resort to the time-worn brandy and soda—he quaffed copiously at bicarbonate of soda.

IN SOUTHERN SEAS

FRIENDLY FERRY

Monte Blue carries the new film "find," Racquel Torres, over a stretch of rugged water in "White Shadows in the South Seas," which will show at Loew's State, Monday.

'GINGER GIRLS' AT GAYETY

"Ginger Girls," a highly spiced combination of musical comedy, vaudeville bits and old-fashioned burlesque, established itself as a hit at the Gayety yesterday. Harry Clexx, Fritzie White and Vinnie Phillips were the featured stars, but they were surrounded by a coterie of entertainers who kept up the fast pace set by the leaders. Clexx is an inventive comedian and his slant on present-day affairs in general and on women in particular was droll.

Vinnie Phillips

Miss White proved to be capable and willing. She and the audience took to each other at once. But this brace of leaders had abundant support.

PROBLEM PLAY AT ST. JAMES

The Keith-Albee St. James players this week are doing Robert McLaughlin's problem play, "The Eternal Magdalene." Julia Arthur and Emmett Corrigan were co-stars in this drama about 15 years ago.

The story of the play concerns the lesson that it is not man's privilege to judge his fellows. The leading citizen of a great American city takes it upon himself to reform his city, clean up the tenderloin district and generally set right the evils of the day. On the eve of his success, he sits before his library fire contemplating his great power.

There appears before him a woman, a nameless woman, whom he learns is his daughter by a woman he had deserted many years ago. Through her influence his eyes are opened to the real value of things. She points out to him that there is more than one skeleton in his own family closet.

It is brought home to him that he has no right to set himself upon a throne and judge those struggling about him. The theme in this play is effectively handled by the dream treatment.

SOPHIE TUCKER IN FAREWELL TO BOSTON

Admitting, nay asserting, that she's "the last of the red-hot mammas," Sophie Tucker, the inimitable, breaks some sad news this week at the Keith Memorial. She's quitting the vaudeville stage for a "new racket," the talking pictures.

"And at my age," beams Sophie.

Believe it or not, that's Sophie's story. Boston is getting its last look at her in the flesh—no, that's not a wisecrack—for some time to come. Happily, it's a very satisfactory look.

England, from where Sophie has just voyaged hither, couldn't change her.

"No use," says Sophie, "trying to put a high hat on a lowdown dame like me."

The Collegiates, with Harold Ringold, Craig and Quintance, have a co-ed revue which is a curtain raiser calculated to penalize tardy patrons. Those who come late and miss it are out of luck.

Bobby May in "All Alone," juggles and makes 'em like it. He also dances, and they like that, too.

Jimmy Savo and company offer music and fun. Jimmy specializes in the fun. The "company" is red-headed.

Russ Brown and Jean Whittaker follow in their sketch, "A Laugh or Two," a title which is rather too modest.

Willie Mauss, "world's champion bicycle rider," demonstrated how he got that way.

Bebe Daniels in "What a Night."

Exit march with Earl Weidner at the organ.

Pilot Escapes Again in Crash

Thompsonville, Conn., Dec. 18—For the second time within two months, Jack Webster, mail plane pilot, escaped death in this State when the fuel supply of his plane became exhausted and he leaped to safety from an altitude of 5000 feet. He was on his way from Cleveland, O., to Hadley Field, N. J., when he became lost in the low clouds.

LILLIAN GISH IN FILM OF WEST AT STATE

Lillian Gish

In "The Wind" at Loew's State, llian Gish is again the beleagured, and-wringing heroine, bothered by uel men and buffeted by the elements. Because ere is nothing more woe-begone than a ation, Miss sh is selected y this trying uation and, as daughter of ruined Southn gentleman, eks refuge at r married sin's home, out on the ak Western airie. As erybody ows who has d on the ins, the wind ws all the e. If you are indoors, it tugs the windows, whistles around cors and moans in the chimney. I you go outside it whips your ning and sends stinging partis of sand into your defenseless e. These little ills, together with loneliness, roughness and poverty of the place, drives the frail l to the verge of distraction. naced by starvation and the ntions of a coarse rascal, played Montagu Love, the thoroughly rized girl consents to marry an uth but kindly disposed catan (Lars Hanson). is inevitable in the way of the es that the husband will one be called away and that the nace"—together with a ripting cyclone, will overtake the creature in her miserable ck. eside herself with fear, the har heroine shoots the "hell hound" buries his body in the sand. gine her horror later to see that worst enemy, the "wind," had ped up the sand, leaving a ly hand sticking in the air! But don't forget, it's a movie, and scenarist spares your feelings proves that even such hard luck this way be dissipated—and that comes right through the power love.

Continuing Shows

TREMONT—"Blackbirds," musical revue. High stepping entertainment by boys and girls from Dixieland.

COLONIAL—"The Houseboat on the Styx," musical comedy. John Kendrick Bangs' amusing story set to music and dialogue. Last days.

ALASKA FILM AT KEITH ALBEE

A Rex Beach story of the Alaskan gold rush is "The Michigan Kid," newly arrived at the Keith-Albee. Conrad Nagel and Renee Adoree are the principal players. Irvin Willat directed. It seems that the public still wants to see these two-fisted adventure yarns of the once lawless North. All the characters in this one are as familiar as ice in the winter time. There is the good little girl (Miss Adoree) who comes north to wed her ne'er-do-well fiance (Lloyd Whitlock); there is the light-fingered gambler who has a heart of gold beating under his rough shirt (Mr. Nagel), and there is, of course, that miserable scoundrel, the ne'er-do-well.

Renee Adoree

Further necessaries to this hard-bitten thriller are an episode or three in the gambling saloon, a pair of snappy fist fights, and a real hot forest fire near the end.

The vaudeville at the Keith-Albee for the week contains a good time for the children. There is the famous Keith Christmas pantomime, presided over by—Mellie and Gram Dunham!

The regular stage show is headed by the "Paper Creations" revue, with Isabel Brown and Madelyn Moore.

'ON TRIAL' AT OLYMPIA AND FENWAY

Each new all-talking film is better than its predecessor. The latest one is "On Trial," made from Elmer Rice's stage play of awhile ago, and the Fenway and Olympia are the places to see it. Archie Mayo did the directing, and the cast is peopled by many popular players both new and old. There is, in a sense, nothing to criticize in the method of transcribing stage dramas to the audible screen. "On Trial" as a film is simply and solely a canned version of the play. The action, as did the play, transpires in a courtroom and the characters speak the self same lines as the original.

Pauline Frederick

If there were dull stretches in the Rice play, they also appear on the screen. Where the dialogue ripens into tense situations, it, too, is faithfully given on the screen.

Pauline Fredericks, an actress who is well acquainted with the technique of both stage and screen, is the outstanding player. And not far behind are found such able actors as Edmund Breese, as the somnulent judge; Richard Tucker and Jason Robards, as opposing lawyers; Holmes Herbert, the villain, and Fred Kelsey, humorously providing his portrait of the court officer.

Lois Wilson, as the heroine, has a great deal of conversation allotted her, but her voice does not record as easily as the others.

The acting in "On Trial" is uniformly good, but in no case is it brilliant. The medium, as cut and dried as it is, does not seem to call for it.

For other diversion at both houses there are various Vitaphone presentations including the Florentine choir.

HUB PIANIST IN CONCERT

By MOSES SMITH

Heinrich Gebhard is one of the few Boston musicians who can entice an audience regularly into Jordan Hall for the pleasure of listening to music-making, and not as a courtesy to a friend or teacher. Presenting his latest program of piano music, Mr. Gebhard had the satisfaction of facing an auditorium comfortably filled with eager listeners.

More than half of this program consisted of music that pianists have played for half a century and more. First there was Bach's Italian Concerto, followed by the even more imposing "Moonlight" Sonata of Beethoven. At the end stood two pieces of Liszt, the "Petrarch Sonata" in E and the Eleventh Rhapsody.

In between, and as foil, Mr. Gebhard offered three short numbers of his own recent composing and a set of waltzes for two pianos, similarly his own. But the "foil" was rather a blunt one, for this music stems very definitely from Liszt, among others. But it is musically written and pleasing to hear, whatever it lacks in sharply individual style.

The pianist played with his usual authority, and with the temperament and conviction that have made of him more than "just another pianist." Technically he was not quite so secure as is his wont. And once or twice memory failed him slightly. But these were small things, and the audience did well to give him successive ovations.

GILBERT FILM AT ORPHEUM

John Gilbert's latest starring photoplay, "The Masks of the Devil," which is presented with sound effects at Loew's Orpheum this week, shows the popular actor in a new and interesting role. Alma Rubens, Theodore Roberts, Eva von Berne and Polly Ann Young all contribute notable performances in support of Gilbert.

Private Clayton K. Slack, a much-decorated hero of the World War, is headliner of an attractive vaudeville program. He tells some of his thrilling experiences of the late conflict and also explains some of the scenes of "Gold Chevrons," official U. S. Government film, which shows Massachusetts boys and others in actual combat "over there."

Other acts on this week's bill include Keller sisters and Lynch, an excellent harmony trio; Ross Wyse, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Wyse, an equally clever trio who amuse with comedy bits, songs and dances; Romaine and Castle, comic entertainers, and Evelyn Phillips, aided by Joe De Vaney and Harold Price, in a tabloid musical comedy act.

Coming Events

"Jim, the Penman," a revival of the original gentleman crook play, comes to the Hollis next Monday.

"The Family Upstairs" will be the offering at the St. James next week.

"Laffin' Thru'" will be the attraction at the Gayety next week.

"The Royal Family" will start its local engagement at the Wilbur on Tuesday (Christmas) night.

Joe Cook in "Rain or Shine" will move into the Shubert on Tuesday (Christmas) night.

"And So to Bed" is announced for the Plymouth, opening with a matinee on Tuesday, Christmas day.

"Cafe De Danse," a revue, will take the stage at the Majestic on Christmas night.

Hearing on El Buses in Brookline

The Brookline board of selectmen gave a hearing to the Boston Elevated Railway Company on its petition for a license to operate buses from Brookline Village along Boylston st. to the Brookline-Newton line. The selectmen took no action.

Attorney [illegible] for the El [illegible] that by [illegible] the buses on and taking [illegible] cars off the street it would do away with much of the noise [illegible] by the cars and [illegible] would be less [illegible]. The citizens present complained mostly on the fact [illegible] coming from Boston would have to transfer at Brookline Village for the buses and that there would be much delay and inconvenience during cold weather.

STUDENT RIOT UNDER PROBE BY HARVARD

Two investigations of the riot of 500 Harvard students in the Harvard sq. subway station and which resulted in the arrest of one "Gold Coast" student and the severe mauling of two special policemen of the Elevated were under way today.

The officials of Harvard College are looking into the facts in the case while the officials of the Boston Elevated are making a more thorough probe.

Only the timely arrival of a riot squad of [illegible] prevented a [illegible] of the famous Harvard Square riot of 19[illegible].

The riot was the culmination of scenes of wild disorder on a subway car crowded with students as the train made its way from Park st. to Harvard sq. The students had been in attendance at a hockey game in Boston in which the Harvard team had participated.

INSPECTOR TAKES HAND

Shortly after the train left Park st. the students began making noise. There were a number of girls with escorts in the car and when one of these escorts objected to the conduct of several students, a fight started. In a moment the car was in an uproar.

When the train reached Kendall sq. the motorman blew his whistle for the special police of the Elevated. Inspector Hugh MacDonald made his way into the car and the train started toward [illegible]. [illegible] time the students were breaking light bulbs, tearing advertising cards from their racks, breaking windows and tearing the signal cords from their fastenings. MacDonald saw one student tear an advertising card from the rack. He placed the student under arrest.

Immediately the other students endeavored to rescue their companion. By this time the train was in Central sq. and again help was summoned. Inspector [illegible] A. Lee [illegible] boarding the car. He saw the [illegible] of his fellow officer. [illegible] students prevented him from pushing his way to Inspector MacDonald [illegible] prisoner. [illegible] order continued on [illegible] to the [illegible] with [illegible] girls [illegible].

When Harvard sq. station was reached MacDonald [illegible] his prisoner [illegible] surrounded on the [illegible] by [illegible] students. [illegible] knocked down, punched [illegible] his [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] was [illegible] MacDonald [illegible] [illegible] his assailants and [illegible] [illegible] Mc[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] A. M. Lee [illegible] the [illegible].

The [illegible] down [illegible] [illegible] was [illegible] in [illegible] waiting in [illegible].

The Cambridge police took charge of MacDonald's prisoner and took him to the [illegible] where he was [illegible] his name as [illegible] H. West, 17, [illegible] his address as 26 West[illegible] one of the famous "Gold Coast" dormitories. He is the son of Percy T. W[illegible] of New York.

"Sax" Drives Away Thoughts of Cold!

He thought he couldn't play that night, but the cold he brought that morning had departed. Most professional people know what really knocks a cold in a few hours. Many go through the winter without any trouble from colds. It's a compound that comes in little white tablets. Take one and that first sniffle is just about [illegible], or several tablets if you've let the cold go until it's serious.

Pape's Cold Compound is all you ask for, and the druggist charges 35c for a package and it never seems to fail for anybody.

HOUSE READY TO PASS DAM BILL TODAY

Washington, Dec. 18 (Universal)—Congress will give the great Boulder Dam project its final stamp of approval today.

Cutting parliamentary red tape [illegible] stroke, the House is expected to concur in the Senate amendments to the Swing-Johnson bill without [illegible] and thus send the measure direct to President Coolidge's desk for his signature.

In adopting this course of procedure with the full approval of House leaders, sponsors of the project hope to avoid another delay of several days which might result if the bill [illegible] sent to [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] progress [illegible] on the project before the [illegible].

While there [illegible] some opposition [illegible] agreeing to the Senate amendments, it appears that [illegible] will be made to send the bill to conference. Overwhelmed by the sweeping majority with which the bill passed the Senate and realizing that the House likewise is strongly in favor [illegible] project [illegible] [illegible] the bill [illegible] [illegible] legislation by employing [illegible] tactics.

O'NEILL LETTER ONLY A RUSE

Shanghai, Dec. 18 (AP)—Eugene O'Neill, American dramatist, who last week sent a letter to a nerve specialist who had been attending him, saying he was leaving Shanghai [illegible], was in his hotel here today and it [illegible] he had never left Shanghai as he had been [illegible]. The letter O'Neill wrote to Alexander Renner, Austrian nerve specialist, was a ruse intended to throw interested persons off the dramatist's trail.

Dr. Renner today said he had no knowledge of the ruse. "I [illegible] understand O'Neill," he continued. "Apparently he disliked my services. He had a right to dismiss me, but he shows no appreciation for my kindness and his actions are most [illegible]."

The management of the Hotel Astor said the playwright was there, but refused to reveal his plans other than to say he was a very sick man and was not seeing anyone.

O'Neill in his letter to Dr. Renner said that due to [illegible] persons seeking to interview him and inquiring into his personal affairs, he planned to leave for Honolulu in quest of peace and solitude, "which if I do not find there, I will find if I have to proceed to the South Pole."

Thug Gets $200 in Daring Lynn Holdup

With some 300 persons passing in front of the Central Tire Company, in Lynn, and within a stone's throw of City Hall where hundreds of employes were in full view, a man relieved Abraham Holzwessen, proprietor of the tire company at 14 City Hall sq., of $200.

Holzwessen was putting a rubber band around the $200 to take the money to a bank, when the robber suddenly appeared in front of him. With pistol in hand the robber calmly said "I'll take that," and seized it out of the proprietor's hand and then ran out the door.

Holzwessen was so excited that, instead of calling to traffic patrolman Edgar Williams, who was doing traffic duty in front of the store, he [illegible]. In the meantime the robber made his getaway through the noon crowd.

WOMAN KILLED AS TRAIN HITS MACHINE

Sharon, Dec. 18—Carefully [illegible] plans for Christmas festivities in two little families of this town were as shattered today as the wreckage of the automobile in which the wife of a Boston [illegible] met instant death, and [illegible] suffered injuries from which she may not recover.

The woman is Mrs. [illegible] T. Kaler, whose [illegible] [illegible] shopping trip to Boston [illegible] she [illegible] bought gifts for those who were to gather at her home [illegible].

Her chauffeur, Arthur McLean, is at the Sharon [illegible] suffering [illegible] [illegible].

The [illegible] had driven Mrs. Kaler's automobile to the Sharon depot to meet [illegible] [illegible] from Boston. She [illegible] previously been to Boston [illegible] on a shopping trip [illegible] it was her custom to await [illegible] every day.

STRUCK BY TRAIN

And almost every day in the past 10 years the chauffeur had driven her to the station. But on this occasion he parked his machine too close to the railroad tracks with the result that the Gilt Edge express, roaring through at a fast clip, [illegible] into the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Mrs. Kaler [illegible] McLean [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] Kaler stepped [illegible] train [illegible] wreckage of the sedan, holding Mrs. Kaler in his arms, and mutely rocking her to and fro. The wreckage lay strewn about the tracks. Miles [illegible] the engineer was [illegible] tied for a crossing, unaware of the tragedy he had left behind.

[illegible] H. M. Baxter [illegible] station [illegible] [illegible] what [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the station [illegible].

HUSBAND COLLAPSES

Kaler, who collapsed [illegible] [illegible] taken to [illegible] body of [illegible] wife was [illegible] ordered to the [illegible] Dr. W. A. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] railroad [illegible] the automobile was [illegible] tracks, it was [illegible] standing between the parking [illegible] [illegible] paradise. It is believed that McLean, misjudging the distance in the blinding rain, parked his machine too close to the rails, or possibly backed the machine directly into the speeding train.

Mr. and Mrs. Kaler were [illegible] [illegible] son Stanley.

Can.-Am. League Wars Draw Crowds

The increasing popularity of hockey in Boston is reflected in figures released by the management of the Boston Tigers today.

A total of 27,889 people have seen the Boston Canadian-American League entry play in the six home games to date.

This composite crowd is 40 per cent larger than that which saw the first six home games of the Cubs last season.

[illegible] this season the Arena would have been forced to turn people away except for the new balcony, [illegible] previous to the season of last year.

The largest crowd was that which saw the Tigers open their season with Newark on Nov. 12. A crowd of [illegible] saw that game.

The second largest crowd was last Saturday night, when the Tigers went into first place by beating New Haven Eagles. A total of [illegible] saw the game.

The Tigers now have a season [illegible] Providence Reds make their [illegible] at the Arena Saturday [illegible]

The [illegible] attendance for the six games to date is as follows: Nov. 12 (Newark), [illegible] Nov. 17 [illegible] (New Haven), [illegible] 7 (Newark), 2767; Dec. 15 (New Haven), [illegible]

The Tigers practiced yesterday noon and will work today and tomorrow in preparation for their game in Providence Thursday night. [illegible] may be ready to play in the return game with the Reds Saturday.

B. U. Grid Awards Not O. K.'d Until January

There will be no varsity football letter certificates in the stocking of Boston University's football players on Christmas Day.

The athletic council of the university failed to act on the recommendations for awards by the B. U. A. A. in its recent meeting and accordingly no work will be done on these awards until the next meeting of the council sometime in January.

As a result, no election of captain of next year's eleven will be held for another month. It was [illegible] to settle the question of next year's grid leader before school closes for the holidays.

MIKE MURPHY TO COACH BADGERS

Madison, Wis., Dec. 18 — George "Mike" Murphy, once stroke on the University of Washington's eight-oar shell and at present freshman coach at Yale, has been signed as varsity crew coach at Wisconsin. Murphy was definitely appointed by the Badger athletic council at a special session.

Mike Murphy is a prominent figure in intercollegiate rowing. For two years he was stroke on the great Washington crews that established remarkable records at Poughkeepsie during 1921-22.

He was elected captain in his junior year and was so respected as a leader that this honor was again bestowed upon him the following spring.

When Ed. Leader went to Yale from Washington in 1923 he took Mike Murphy with him to supervise the freshmen. Murphy has been in charge of the yearling oarsmen ever since and has established a great record.

Under his guidance the Yale frosh has competed in 15 races against Eastern intercollegiate boats, registering 11 victories in the past five years.

Murphy will bring to Wisconsin a new technique in rowing. He teaches the Leader stroke. He will be the youngest varsity crew coach in the country.

MALDEN HIGH MINUS A GRID MENTOR

By DICK McSWEENEY

With Christmas only eight days away, Malden High is hoping that Santa Claus will leave a football coach in its stocking. Hubert McDonough, present coach at Manchester, N. H., may handle the Malden team next fall. Jack McDonald, former Malden and Watertown mentor, also is mentioned for the job.

Bill Dempsey, present coach in one of the Malden junior high schools, and Edmund Goodreau, who assisted Coach Batchelder with the Malden eleven last season, are the other possibilities.

It is unlikely that McDonough will leave Manchester, for the former Dartmouth star has set up an enviable record in the New Hampshire city and the fans in that section are loath to lose such an excellent grid teacher.

McDonald and Dempsey, although they have not had the publicity which McDonough is enjoying, are two brainy football men, and can be depended upon to put out a fighting team at Malden.

GOODREAU LIKELY CHOICE

The most logical choice for the position seems to be Edmund Goodreau. Goodreau has assisted Batchelder in coaching football at Malden for the past two years, and for a short time this past season he had complete charge of the team during Coach Batchelder's illness.

Goodreau is experienced and capable.

In 1925 and 1926 he assisted Coach Mansfield with the baseball and football teams of Haverhill high school.

Athletic authorities at Malden are keeping quiet on the coaching situation and although they may be secretly dickering with coaches of other schools, the 1929 mentor is not liable to be selected until spring.

Henry Batchelder came to Malden four years ago to coach the Malden grid teams. He had a fair degree of success until this year when Malden lost four games in a row to Haverhill, Melrose, Lynn Classical and Manchester.

During the Manchester contest the anti-Batchelder element in the Malden stands freely booed Coach Batchelder.

BATCHELDER BROKE DOWN

Shortly before the annual Malden-Medford game, Batchelder broke down under the strain of constant criticism and was confined to his home for a few days with a case of shattered nerves.

The donors of the Malden athletic field have been displeased with the poor showing of the team.

Dr. Oscar Q. Martin, coach of the Newton hockey sextet, has two veterans of last year's ice squad returning and is hopeful of a successful season. Capt. Harrington, goalie, and Gilligan, left defense, are the youths who saw experience last winter.

Brown will play center on the Newton sextet this year. Of the 73 boys out for the ice sport at Newton, Wilkes, Farrell, Fletcher and Riley are promising prospects seeking berths in the forward line.

The squad has done but little skating in the past few days due to the scarcity of good ice.

Tommy Murphy, Rindge basketball mentor, will give out uniforms to his quintet tomorrow. Frank Westcott, captain and forward of the Rindge five, and Frank Foster, a guard, are the only veterans left from last year.

The team has been practicing at the St. Mary's gym in Cambridge, for the last two days for its opening game with Winchester on Dec. 19.

Brookline's outlook for a successful track season is a bit gloomy, for the stars of last year's great team have graduated.

Coach Tom Hines has 100 candidates out for the various events and is giving them work on the outdoor track.

John Badarocco, dash and 300-yard star, is captain of the team.

Coach Hines has some promising boys in the group, composed of Stevens Smith, 600 yarder; David Harrie, fast 1000 man; Harry Fink, shot putter and hurdler; Albert Lo Casio, broad jumper; Peter Rachlotes, high jumper and dash star, and Edward Duane, the best of the hurdlers.

The 300-yard run is quite a problem to Coach Hines. He has 50 boys out for this event alone.

Giants Will Control Bridgeport Club

New York, Dec. 18 (INS)—Abandoning their efforts to have the minor league farm idea legislated out of baseball, the New York Giants are in the chain store business themselves.

In announcing that the Giants had purchased a controlling interest in the Bridgeport club of the Eastern League, John McGraw, manager and vice-president, said that he didn't expect to make any money out of the Bridgeport franchise. Hans Lobert, Giants coach, will manage the club.

McGraw may give President John A. Heydler's plan for a ten-man team a tryout in exhibition games this spring between National League clubs.

"I may have a tenth man bat for pitchers who work only three innings," said McGraw. "I'll try anything once."

MR. BOSTON

By Jack Conway

"IT would be a queer twist of fate if Vince Dundee, who clashes with Al Mello at the Boston Garden on Thursday night, should eventually win the world's welterweight crown which is held by his brother Joe," chirped Mr. Boston today.

"Of course two brothers could never battle for a championship," resumed the veteran. "But in the event Joe should be tipped from his throne it would be only natural that Vince would open fire on the new champion.

"Brothers like to avenge the defeats of each other. There was the famous case of the Sullivan twins of Cambridge.

"Mike went out to the Coast years ago to meet 'a fellow by the name of Stanley Ketchel.'

"Ketchel knocked Mike out in a round. I met Mike when he returned East.

"'What did you let an unknown like Ketchel knock you cold for?' I said as I joked Mike about being stopped.

"'That bird will lick any of us,' declared Mike with rare frankness. 'He is the greatest fighter I ever set my eyes on.'

Brother Jack didn't quite agree with Mike and later accepted an offer to battle Ketchel. For a time his speed and knowledge of boxing kept him out of the way of Stanley's [illegible] but in the 20th round Ketchel caught up with him and won by a knockout.

"'Mike had the right dope on Ketchel,' piped Jack when he breezed back into town.

"WHEN Jim Jeffries tired of boxing, he tried to send Brother Jack to the front. Jack resembled Jeff in name and size only and didn't get very far.

"The Gardner brothers of Lowell, Jimmy and George, were a famous pair of fighting brothers. They rated with the leading men of their time.

"Jimmy Britt had a brother, Willie, who started as a boxer, but who later decided there was more coin and an easier road in being a manager.

"Philadelphia Jack O'Brien had a brother who boxed under the name of Young Jack O'Brien, but he failed to set any worlds afire by his work in the ring.

"Stribling has a young brother who is boxing, but he has yet to get to first base. Benny Leonard also has a brother who hasn't made any brilliant progress in the fistic racket.

"PERHAPS Vince Dundee will upset some of the traditions of the ring and become even a greater battler than his celebrated brother. In the case of the Dundee brothers they are both in the welterweight division, which presents an unusual situation.

"If Mello should happen to lick Vince and Joe, he might demand that they bring on their old man so that he could make a clean sweep of the Dundee family.

"EDDIE MACK says Dundee and Mello will play to a big crowd despite the fact we are in the midst of the holiday season. He points to the fact they top a card which includes five 10-round bouts, in which only boxers of national prominence are carded to appear.

"WE were going to say something about famous boxers who were followed in the ring by sons of great ability when we thought of Young Bob Fitzsimmons, son of Ol' Fitz, former heavyweight champion of the world. Then we decided to leave the matter rest. Young Bob is a fine boy, but even his own father, if alive, never would have cheered his boxing craft or punching power.

"REMEMBER Mrs. Bob Fitz at the ringside the night Ol' Bob fought Jim Corbett?

"'Punch him in the slats, Bob,' she cried.

"Old Bob then delivered his famous solar plexus blow and a new champion was crowned."

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

Jimmy Herberts and Carson Cooper will receive a hearty welcome from the fans when they hop on the ice tonight at the Boston Garden to wage battle for Detroit against the Bruins.

Herberts and Cooper will never be forgotten by the fair-minded hockey enthusiasts, for they were the best forwards that have ever represented Boston.

Since he joined the N. H. L. Carson Cooper has been one of its best scorers. He is the leading goal getter of the American Division this season and will give Perk Galbraith and [illegible] a tussle to keep him from ringing up a couple this evening.

Jimmie Herberts is still the same sensational, fearless Jimmy. For three years he thrilled the local fans and it will be a pleasure to watch the Sailor flip around as of yore, even though he is wearing an enemy uniform.

Herberts and Cooper took their old teammates for a ride after they had hung a 2 to 0 defeat on the Bruins in Detroit by inquiring as to how they liked the game.

By battling their way to a 2-to-2 tie with New Haven, the Springfield Indians pulled up even with the Tigers in the Can-Am race, and Philadelphia dropped back to third place.

Pres. J. W. Allen and Manager Sprague Cleghorn of the Newark club are revising the home schedule of the Bulldogs. Newark is going to play six games in Madison Square Garden, three of which will be with the Tigers, two with the Arrows and one with Springfield. Such arrangements are all right with the Tigers, few of whom have ever seen New York.

The Montreal fans are crying for the scalp of Clint Benedict, the veteran Maroon goalie. They claim that Walsh should be in the nets, for Benedict is, and has been for a year, slipping fast.

They point to the 20 goals scored on the veteran in 13 games this season. Eddie Girard is still holding out for Benedict, but he may be forced to shift unless Clint returns to his old time form.

Manager Sprague Cleghorn took his Newark team to New York today to watch the Pittsburgh-American game in the Madison Square Garden. Newark plays the Arrows in Philadelphia tomorrow night and [illegible] arranged for an early start so that his players could see a couple of big league teams in action.

Any manager who has so much consideration for his players cannot miss getting results.

When Bill Field returns to the lineup after the holidays, the Tigers will have a fine second line, with the tall blonde at center and Eddie Burke and Clark Heyd on the wings.

With his wonderful shot, Burke is out of position at center, but he should be one of the leading scorers of the Can-Am League playing on the wing. Shooting from a wing, Eddie Burke has no peer in either league.

Rumors are current that one of the most prominent National Hockey League managers will be seeking a new berth next season. And his most difficult task is still in front of him, that of framing an alibi as to why he failed to deliver.

Lester Patrick of the New York Rangers made a trip to Springfield last Saturday to look over Sparky Vail of the Indians. Sparky was having one of his off nights, and Lester is now of the opinion that Vail puts on an act every time he (Patrick) is scouting him, preferring to stay in Springfield, where he is sitting pretty.

Ponzi Contant and Ludger Desmarais have played on the Tiger defense for the greater part of the last two games, with Springfield and New Haven, and they have given a fine account of themselves. They are the bodying type of defense men. That style of play has been lacking on the Tigers since Ag Smith and Dit Clapper guarded Herb Rheaume.

Only two goals have been scored on the Tigers since Ponzi and Demmy took charge, and neither of these could be chalked up against the Frenchmen.

WHO Is Holding Up Sunday Sports Bill—WHY?

One of the most astounding acts of the present Boston City Council was the tabling, yesterday, of the measure to permit professional Sunday Sports in the City of Boston.

It is the common belief, among those who are still naive enough to believe in some of the forms of city government, that the voice of the people should at least be heard, if not implicitly obeyed, by duly elected representatives of the people.

The Boston City Council, on what pretext it is difficult to understand, yesterday voted to table the measure that would have permitted professional Sunday sports in Boston.

One of the most plausible reasons for such an action is that the Council desired to learn something more about the measure before voting upon it.

In case the members of the Boston City Council cannot, or do not, read the daily papers, we wish to call their attention to the fact that the people of the City of Boston, by a vote of 172,800 to 54,418, with ninety per cent of the total vote cast, on November 6, demanded that they be allowed to witness professional Sunday sport contests.

Yet, certain members of the Council were unwilling to obey the mandate of the people whom they represent. WHY?

Members of the Council, who, by their vote, show themselves unwilling to abide by the votes of the people they pretend to represent, will be asked by the Boston Evening American to justify their position.

One member of the Boston City Council, after expressing his determination to follow the will of the people whom he represents, and who declared that he would vote for the measure, suddenly discovered that HE, PERSONALLY, WAS OPPOSED TO THE MEASURE!

Are City Councillors elected to express their own preference, or the WILL OF THE PEOPLE?

The people of the City of Boston have spoken. They have, by a vote of more than THREE to ONE, expressed the desire to witness professional Sunday Sports.

The members of the Boston City Council know this.

When the measure comes up again, what are they going to do?

The Boston Evening American, which has supported the professional Sunday Sports Bill, intends to discover the reason, why, in the face of the overwhelming demand of the people of the City of Boston, certain members of the Council refuse to obey the mandate of the people.

Perhaps someone is waiting for Santa Claus.

By BILL GRIMES

Hoping to stumble into a winning combination, the Bruins were shaken up to such an extent that they will look like a new club when they line up against the Detroit Cougars tonight at the Boston Garden

Perk Galbraith was shifted from his old berth on left wing to the defense. Dutch Gainor was given the call over Cooney Weiland at center ice and Eric Pettinger has been assigned to left wing.

The Bruins have failed to live up to expectations and after losing three games in a row, it was thought advisable to make some drastic changes.

Hitchman is out of the game for an indefinite period, with a broken shoulder, while Fredrickson is still limping from an ankle injury. Galbraith had a boil lanced yesterday but he refused to take a layoff

Just how much of an improvement the new combination is going to make remains to be seen

GALBRAITH ON DEFENSE

The dropping of Galbraith to the defense appears to be a smart move. Galbraith is one of the best defensive players in the league. He should show to better advantage playing on the defense and he will prove a tough barrier for opponents to outguess.

In the shakeup there are two outstanding surprises, the rating of Dutch Gainor over Cooney Weiland for the center ice berth and Klein having the call over Red Green.

Gainor has been tried at center in the past but he never acted in a natural manner. He is a defense man and therefore cannot be expected to shine on the forward line. In fact, he has not the physique necessary to play on the line, and therefore tires quickly.

Weiland has performed exceptionally well for a youngster breaking into the big show. Already he is a great favorite with the fans who appreciate smart center play and quick [illegible]

GREEN DESERVES SHOW

Red Green was traded from the New York Americans for Harry Connor. He is a fine winger, one of the best in the game, but he has not been given a chance to show his ability to the local fans this season.

He has been used only on rare occasions and for that reason, he has been slow getting into condition. Green needs plenty of work, as does any other player. He has been going to seed decorating the bench.

Carson Cooper, the high scorer of the American Division, will lead Pettinger and Klein a merry chase this evening. An experienced player should be assigned to cover left wing for Cooper will prove far too tricky for either of these youngsters

The Cougars have a two-point edge on the Bruins, who, due to Pittsburgh and Chicago being hopelessly outclassed and wholly unfit for the N. H. L., are virtually fighting to loose themselves from the "cellar" berth of their division.

THREATEN FORMER TEAMMATES TONIGHT

JIM HERBERTS

CARSON COOPER

Herberts and Cooper, who used to team up so well for the Bruins, will work together against the Boston team tonight at the new Garden for the Detroit Cougars. Cooper is the leading scorer in his division of the National Hockey League. Fans will flock to see their old favorites tonight.

THOMPSON OR FIELDS FOR WINNER

An outstanding California contender for the welterweight title will be imported by Promoter Eddie Mack to meet the winner of the 10 round struggle between Al Mello of Lowell and Vince Dundee of Baltimore, the principals in the wind-up of the $20,000 all-star fistic attraction at the new Boston Garden, Thursday night, according to negotiations now being carried on

In an effort to select the best opponent for Champion Joe Dundee, the Hub promoter will bring either Jackie Fields or Cyclone Jack Thompson to the Hub for the winner of Thursday's fight. Both of these fighters have been cleaning up on the coast and it was only a few weeks ago that Thompson knocked out the champion.

Dundee already has taken the measure of Fields in one of the most thrilling bouts ever witnessed on the coast, but Mello, thus far, has not been able to procure a match with either of them. Judging by present negotiations, Promoter Mack will soon close with either of these outstanding title contenders.

And for this reason, the welterweight conflict Thursday night looms up as the most important that Mello ever faced. In this section of the country, Mello is regarded as superior to any welterweight in the game. It is the opinion here that he can defeat either of the coast boys and any other contender for the championship.

N.E. Swim Stars Race in Roxbury Pool

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

All the New England men swimming champions are entered in the men's swimming meet tonight—which is part of the Boston park department's program for reopening the Cabot Street Bath and Gymnasium in Roxbury.

These champions, with 150 other entries, will compete in an open swim meet in the elaborately fitted pool

[illegible] of the Boston Swimming Association, national junior backstroke champion, will be seen in the 100 yard back stroke, against Fred Lucy of M. I. T., New England champion.

John Jarosh, another M. I. T. paddler; Carrington Noel, Worcester Boys' Club, New England breast stroke champion; and Larry O'Connell, of Providence, will battle in the century backstroke.

BROWN TEAM COMING

The meet should be one of the best ever to be held in any of the Greater Boston pools. Brown University is sending its relay quartet to compete against the Boston Swimming Association; Worcester Boys' Club; Boys' Club of Boston, and three other teams.

Swimming fans look for thrills in the 100-yard freestyle event with a score or more starters. Chief among the entries are John Lynch and George Shinney of the Boys Club of Boston; Deane Baker and James Kennedy of the Boston Swimming Association; Clayton Hardon of Providence, and Mathew Carroll and Joseph Rogers of the Worcester Boys' Club

John Osipowich, brother of Albina Osipowich, world's champion and Olympic swim winner, will compete in the 500 yards freestyle. The Worcester young man burst into the front ranks of the New England swimmers last summer.

He has captured the 220, 440, 880 and one mile New England swimming championships. Entered with him from Worcester is Paul Dowling, another very capable performer.

APPLETON IN 300

Raph Appleton of the Boston Swimming Association will be one of the leading lights in the 300 yards medley race. Two other worthy performers in this event will be Fred Lee and William Lynch of the Boys' Club of Boston,

SANGOR DEFEAT BIG SURPRISE

Chicago, Dec. 18 (AP)—A 20-year-old Cuban youth, Armando Santiago, today was the foremost contender for the world's junior lightweight championship. He gained this position by [illegible] two-round knockout over Joey Sangor of Milwaukee last night.

Santiago [illegible] off Sangor as though he were just an ordinary [illegible] and eager instead of a contender for a championship. After a bristling first round, in which they traded punches like two longshoremen, Sangor came out confidently for the second.

Within the twinkling of an eye he was groggy and reeling from a sharp right cross to the chin. Santiago mailed him flush on the point of the jaw with a short right that knocked him to the floor for the count of nine.

Santiago, boxing calmly and with deliberation, let fly with another right that knocked Sangor half way across the ring where he sprawled flat on his face. He tried to get up, through instinct alone. He managed to get himself up to one knee, then slumped back to the floor and fell victim to the fatal 10 count.

Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia's world's light heavyweight champion won over "Big Boy" Peterson of Minneapolis.

Cranberry Cocktail, Roast Pork, Gravy, Blushing Apples, Baked Potatoes, Onions, Squash, Vegetable Salad, Date Pudding, Hard Sauce, Turkish Delight.

Here's another:

Christmas Cocktail, Roast Turkey, Cranberry Sauce, Dressing, Gravy, Baked Potatoes, Squash, Celery, Radishes, Christmas Salad, Mayonnaise, Date Pudding, Hard Sauce, Turkish Delight.

Blushing Apples—Six firm cooking apples (medium size) ½ cup red cinnamon candies, ½ cup sugar, 1 cup water.

Dissolve sugar and candies. Peel and core apples and place in a shallow pan which can be covered. Baste often. Cook until soft, but not until they lose their shape.

Cranberry Cocktail—To any fruit combination such as oranges, grapefruit, bananas, add enough [illegible] and sweetened cranberry juice to give a red color to the cocktail [illegible].

Christmas Cocktail—Decorate any combination of neutral colored fruits with green and red maraschino cherries. Or use pieces of red apple with the skin left on.

Christmas Salad—One and one half tbsp. granulated gelatin ½ cup cold water (soak ten minutes), 1 cup boiling water, one-third cup sugar, ½ cup strained lemon juice (add to soaked gelatin and stir till dissolved).

Cool and add ¾ cup minced celery, 1 tbsp. mild vinegar, ¾ cup minced cabbage and 3 tbsp. chopped red pimentos. Stir gelatin occasionally before it stiffens, so that vegetables will be well distributed. Serve on green lettuce.

Turkish Delight—Three tbsps. gelatin, 2 cups sugar, ½ cup cold water, ½ cup hot water, grated rind and juice of 1 orange, grated rind and juice of 1 lemon, red and green coloring.

Soak gelatin in cold water. Put sugar and hot water in a saucepan. When it reaches the boiling point add gelatin and simmer 20 minutes. Add color and flavorings; strain into a bread-pan which has been rinsed in cold water.

The mixture should be from one-half to one inch in depth. If desired a little clove flavoring may be used with the red candy. When cold, turn out on a board. Cut into [illegible] or other shapes and roll in [illegible] sugar.

Date Pudding—One lb. dates, ½ lb. beef suet, 3 cups bread crumbs, ¾ cup sugar, 1 egg, ½ cup milk, 4 tbsp. flour, 2 tsp. baking powder.

Chop the dates and suet very fine. Mix the suet with the bread crumbs. Add the dates and sugar. Stir in the egg and milk and flour in which has been sifted the baking powder. Put in a greased mold and steam for 3 hours. Serve with any desired sauce.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

A Wife's Meditations

By HELEN ROWLAND

HERE is a letter from Santa Claus:

Dear Miss Rowland:

I'm all fussed! Wonder if you can help me out.

Just as I had my pack all ready and tied up, here comes a fresh bunch of mail, and judging from its contents I'm a rotten guesser and haven't got a darned thing right!

Here's a letter from a debutante. I thought she wanted a new car and a diamond anklet, but what she asks for is a genuine old-fashioned lover, who will kiss her under the mistletoe as though he really MEANT it and not as though it were just a joke.

And here's a married woman for whom I had a big check and an ermine coat. But all she wants, it seems, is one whole evening of her husband's society and a few little devoted attentions from him on Christmas Eve.

Here's a little girl to whom I was bringing a thousand-dollar playhouse and a load of French dolls. And at the last minute she writes and tells me to "cut out the toys" and bring her some French perfume and long silk stockings and pink undies.

And a popular young bachelor, for whom I have several loads of burnt offerings from the fair sex, asks only that I will "lay off" him for once, and threatens to shoot me if I bring him another cigar-lighter.

A nice old lady, whose day I was going to brighten with a pair of warm bedroom slippers and a lace cap, writes for a box of rejuvenating cream, a hundred gold-tipped cigarettes and a book on sex appeal!

And a tired business man, for whom I was keeping my best box of perfectos and a bottle of liniment, wants a good hair tonic, a couple of seats for the Follies, some red neckties and my telephone list!

I hunt around for a lot of frillies and some old-fashioned novels for a sweet young thing—and here comes her letter demanding a pair of hiking breeches, a swagger stick and a book on psychoanalysis.

Now, I ask you, what can a poor old gentleman DO in a world that has turned completely topsy-turvy? A world in which all the women are trying to be mannish, all the men are trying to be foolish, and all the children are grown-ups? Yours-in-a-maze,
SANTA.

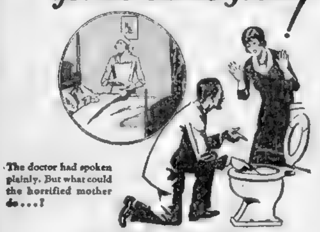
"There's where the germs came from!"



The doctor had spoken plainly. But what could the horrified mother do . . . ?

"Look in this hand glass. See the reflection of the groove around the rim of the toilet bowl? See the ugly yellow crust? That crust held the germs that are now endangering your child's life."

OTHER doctors are saying the same thing. For germs breed in that crust—and spread disease.

That crust is forming constantly. Therefore, the groove must be cleaned every day.

The N. Y. State Department of Health says, ". . . typhoid fever originates from infectious material discharged by a human being."

Is there a crust under the rim of your toilet bowl? Probably so—because ordinary cleansers cannot reach it.

SOLVIT-ALL is the easy, quick, sanitary way to clean that rim. And to clean the rest of the bowl as well.

How to use SOLVIT-ALL. Just pour a little on the handy brush (one comes with every bottle)—and swab it gently around the groove—and all crust is gone!

A few drops in the water, enough to color it, take away the film down in the bowl itself.

SOLVIT-ALL is harmless to hands or woodwork. Thousands of women are using SOLVIT-ALL. Great women's magazines recommend it. It's so easy. So effective. So quick.

Start using SOLVIT-ALL today. It's not too late now. BUT IT MAY BE IF YOU WAIT.

Mind-Body a Unit

By LOUIS E. RISCH, M. D., Ph. D.

PSYCHOLOGY has made such tremendous strides of late years and the mechanisms of the mind, as such, have accordingly received so much attention that it is not astonishing that people sometimes think of the brain as a seperate and distinct organ that has very little to do with the rest of the body.

We say body and mind for purposes of convenience only. The mind is just as much a part of the body as is the heart, liver, kidneys or any other organ.

Mind and body are a single unit.

Mind is really a term used to describe the brain—the actual physical nerve substance—when it functions. The function of the brain is thinking or the manufacture of thoughts. Just how this is done, nobody knows. A thought has never been isolated and studied under the microscope as have the functional products of the rest of the body organs.

We do know that nerve energy, flowing in the nerves, behaves very much like an electric current. Chemistry undoubtedly has a lot to do with it. It is probable, too, that nerve energy is generated in the nerve cells—a knob-like structure at the very beginning of a nerve—for nerve energy always flows from this nerve cell outwards, along the nerve fibres or strands to their final ends.

When we speak, therefore, of depleting or wasting nerve energy we are not, in the last analysis, employing an absurd figure of speech. Chemical changes do take place in nerve cells upon which energy is too heavily drawn. Nerve cells seem to need rest to recharge themselves the same as muscle cells or liver cells or any other tissue of the body.

The mind certainly affects the body. But the state of the body also most certainly affects mental processes.

The brain, you see, is really the switchboard of the body.

From it, by means of the spinal cord, there radiate thousands of nerve fibers. In one way or another every tiniest part of the body is connected up with a nerve and, directly or indirectly, these all connect up with the brain.

A sick organ, the stomach for instance, is therefore registered as sick by the mind. And not only do nerves connected with the stomach register pain, and the mind perceives it as such, but toxins given off by the sick organ circulate in the blood and lymph streams, and these retard the healthy functioning of the brain as well. Headaches and dizziness are accordingly common in constipation.

If the mind is sick, on the other hand, with worry, fear, doubt, or what not, it affects the body.

It is a well known fact that worry undermines the health of the entire body. Since the organs become devitalized because they do not receive adequate nerve impulses they fall a prey to germs and degenerative changes.

The close interrelationship existing between mind and body is complicated, but an understanding of first principles helps you mightily to help yourself.

In fact, the more you know about the anatomy and psysiology of your own body the better will you be able to care for it.

Do Not Think That Jealousy Is True Love

By Beatrice Fairfax
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

WHAT trait is there in all the world that produces so much futile unhappiness as jealousy?

In this era of honesty and self-analysis it is well to ask ourselves whether anything is gained by the mischievous emotion, and if not, how it can be eliminated!

As I write two letters on the subject of jealously lie on my desk.

"Dear Miss Fairfax," runs the first letter. "Will you write a short paragraph about jealousy? A young man of 21 whom I know is very much in love. He insists that everyone in love is jealous, because it is part of his or her nature. If a person in love is not a little jealous sometimes he or she does not really love. He says they may not show it but the feeling is there just the same.

"A friend of mine, a woman of 33 who has had a very unhappy experience in her life, says she partly agrees with this young man, as his statement is true in most cases. But she claims there are a few fine natures who really love without jealousy—that real love commands respect and sincerity and jealousy is not allowed to enter.

"GEORGIE."

It may be Georgie, as your friend suggests, that most of us mortals, at some time or another, feel a twinge of jealousy. This is due to the desire to possess exclusively whatever attracts us.

As babies we cry for the moon, if we happen to fancy it as a plaything. Either little Tommie or little Dottie may set up a howl when a plate of peaches is passed and someone else gets the biggest and ripest. Exactly the same selfish trait causes Tommie at 21 to fly into a rage if he fancies Dotty and she dances more with other partners or accepts an invitation from another admirer, or even smiles into any other than Tommie's eyes.

A slight expression of Tommie's jealousy may flatter Dotty, but how soon her enjoyment palls when she realizes that Tommie is determined to monopolize her every whim and mood for his own gratification.

Dotty, on the other hand, may play tyrant, demanding Tommie's every smile and thought. Many a Dotty has wept herself right out of her Tommie's heart by jealous suspicions and accusations and nagging. Of course, Tommie admires attractive and likeable girls, not being blind or an idiot. Why should he not?

A little pretended jealousy, in the form of a becoming pout, provided Dotty is really not the least bit jealous, may amuse and flatter Tommie. But a downright jealous sweetheart will soon drive him away, because jealousy is the most disagreeable trait in the world. Jealous tears only make Dotty ugly to look at, and old before her time.

I know personally happily married couples who have not a trace of jealousy. They are very human, too, but they are mentally healthy.

"Please tell me how to overcome jealousy," begs Jacqueline.

"I am ashamed of this ugly yet tragic trait in my disposition," she adds. "Often I am unhappy for days when my sister, whom I love with all my heart, enjoys the company of some person besides myself. Or if I even pass a girl who is attractive or pretty, the most unkind [illegible] both me and the surge of jealousy that overwhelms me [illegible] makes me suffer.

"I am a girl of eighteen. Surely this fearful jealousy is strange, especially as I am naturally affectionate. Please help me by telling me how to overcome jealousy."

Of course, you can overcome jealousy, Jacqueline. So can the unhappy young man of twenty-one mentioned in the first letter I printed today. Above all, get it out of your head that jealousy is part of love.

Many men and women have a blotched or mottled skin. Yet this defect is not normally part of a healthy skin, so it can be overcome and usually is, for there are countless healthy men and women with fine clear skin texture.

In the same way jealousy is a mental defect, while happy love, free from jealousy, is the normal standard and can be attained by all with effort.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

The other day I dined at the rather luxurious home of a friend of mine, and I was especially interested in the after-dinner coffee service. This friend has her coffee served in her living room as you suggested in your column.

The after-dinner coffee service consisted of coffee cups of varied colors—I think there were no two alike. The cups were of a plain outline, there were no designs on them, and their only decoration was the color outside of the cup and the gold inside of the cup.

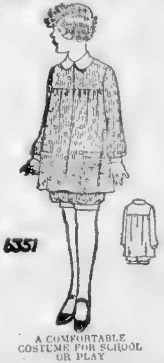
Have you seen this kind of service? Have I made it clear with my description? Do you like it?

THERESE.

INDEED I do like it! And you did make your description clear. I think that it is one of the most charming ways of serving after-dinner coffee. And I often use this service myself. It is known as the "harlequin" idea, a delightfully felicitous name that suggests, of course, the many colors.

The charm of this service rests especially, I think, in the fact that, by the arrival of the after-dinner coffee period, one wishes change in the coloring of the china, something unusually appealing to the eye. This harlequin method of serving the coffee accomplishes this, adding a touch of gayety and change.

There are lovely dark and light blues, dark and light browns, dark and light greens, a rich black, a Spring-like yellow, a wondrously beautiful red. If you are not able to locate these, I think that I can help you, if you will send me your address.



A COMFORTABLE COSTUME FOR SCHOOL OR PLAY

6351. A Dress with Bloomers is ideal for the little girl of kindergarten or school age. The model here portrayed has a square yoke to which full skirt portions are gathered. A soft round collar finishes the neck edge above a sash and dear little pockets trim the front. The sleeve is full at the wrist where it joins a band cuff. The bloomers, in regulation style, are finished with leg bands. Printed zephyr was chosen in this instance, with facings of crepe on collar, pockets and band cuffs. Light weight woolens are recommended for warmth: pongee or repp, cotton broadcloth, and linen are also good.

The Pattern is cut in 4 Sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. To make the Dress for a 6-year size will require 3⅛ yards of 36-inch material, together with ¼ yard of contrasting material for facings on pockets, collar, cuffs and leg bands.

Patterns mailed to any address on receipt of 12c. in coins or stamps. Send number and size of pattern ordered with your name and address.

Send 12c in coins or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE FALL AND WINTER 1928-29 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

COOKING SCHOOL NEWS

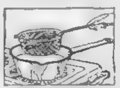
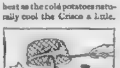
All you need is an ordinary saucepan, a French Fryer and a 3-pound tin of Crisco.

Put your Crisco into a cold pan and heat slowly. When a piece of bread browns in 20 seconds your Crisco is ready for frying potatoes. Don't wait for Crisco to smoke.



Fill your French Fryer half full of potatoes and lower it into the Crisco. Increase the heat as the cold potatoes naturally cool the Crisco a little.



When brown lift French Fryer out of the fat, shake lightly, drain the potatoes on brown paper and sprinkle with salt.

When you have finished strain your Crisco back into the can and set it aside to cool. Then it is ready to use over and over again for anything you want to fry. The taste of one thing will not be carried to another.

French Fried Potatoes

JUST because we eat them almost every day we are likely to think of potatoes as a homely food. Why—they are banquet food! Really the flavor of the potato—particularly when French fried—is one of the most subtle and delicate of all flavors that inventive nature ever concocted.

But to bring out this delicate flavor it is essential that you use a sweet flavored cooking fat. And there's only one way to really test the flavor of your fat—taste it, just as you taste your milk; just as you test your eggs.

Taste Crisco as it comes from the can. Isn't it easy to understand now why Crisco's fresh sweet flavor makes fried foods taste so much better?

French Fried Potatoes

A real treat at home. When fried in Crisco they are delicious—a crisp even brown, no greasy outside and no smoke in your kitchen.

Allow one medium-sized potato for each person. Peel potatoes, cut in strips about one-half inch square. Let stand in cold water about an hour, or they can be kept in the ice-box overnight if covered with water. When ready to fry, drain, dry in a towel, and put a few at a time into hot Crisco (395° F.), or when a bread crumb browns in 20 seconds. When brown and tender, drain on brown paper, sprinkle with salt, and serve.

Fry raw or cooked sweet potatoes the same way, but do not soak them in water.

Never wait for Crisco to smoke, as it would be too hot to fry if it were hot enough to smoke.

You test your eggs—

NOW—taste your shortening!

Crisco's sweet flavor will delight you!

The RISE OF LOTTA CRABTREE

Remarkable Story of Actress Boston Knew Well

By CONSTANCE ROURKE

CHAPTER 14

THE temper of the new camp had grown fierce in a summer of unusually intense drouth, when water was lacking to wash gold Crabtree got nothing The weather was too dry; rougher characters reached the ground before him; he worked too little, spent too many hours at the camp bars, or roamed off no one knew where. Crabtree was a vigorous man, who chose what he wanted and kept to his choice If there had ever been a doubt before what this was it was clear enough hence forward. Crabtree wanted unobstructed leisure. When winter closed down again his wife was obliged to turn to the sole means of living which lay before her Once more she managed a boarding-house under far greater difficulties than before, ruder in surroundings, with all roads cut off.

In the spring Lola Montez rode over the mountains, taking the high abrupt trail to Downieville through thick forests, dipping into cleft valleys. She had grown restless at last, and meant to go to Australia. Every one wondered why she had remained so long in seclusion at Grass Valley. Rumors were abroad of a fantastic political scheme by which she was to become Empress of California in a seceded empire. At least a faint token came down the years of such a wild enterprise.

Morose and violent, she had clashed with the editor of a Nevada City newspaper who, adding a slurred allusion to herself, had criticised some unfortunate strolling players whom she had befriended. Whether or not she horsewhipped him remains a question, but at least a furor arose that reverberated along the Coast.

Lola Montez had a purpose beyond that of saying farewell in coming to Rabbit Creek. Knowing the straitened circumstances of the Crabtrees, she hoped to take Lotta with her to Australia. Mrs Crabtree's refusal was sharp.

Lola returned alone to Grass Valley, and was soon off to Australia with her maid Periwinkle and a young actor named Folland, followed by a mixed and generous encomium in the Grass Valley Telegraph, which acknowledged her vagaries and praised her charities. She was to return to California within a year.

To such a proposal as Lola had just made Mrs. Crabtree would always have given a passionate reply. Now she had every reason for a refusal. Events had moved. In the midst of the roaring life at Rabbit Creek was a young Italian who went under the name of Mart Taylor, and was something of a musician, a dancer, a versifier, and a cobbler.

Lotta, who grew fond of him, said long afterwards that he had come to California "with all kinds of air castles packed up in his carpet bag. They toppled over as soon as he set them up, and he fell back upon music for a living." Taylor ran a saloon, where music was abundant, and a little log theater, where he sometimes joined with traveling players, and a dancing school for the few small children of the camp. He was accomplished in jigs and reels, and added to Lotta's repertoire of steps.

The Child's Dancing Had Begun to Attract Attention in the Camp

The child's dancing had begun to attract attention in the camp when Dr. Robinson appeared there with small Sue Robinson in his train. He had at once demanded to see Lotta. With a table for a stage, and Sue grinding a hand-organ for music, Lotta danced a cracovienne, which she had learned from Lola Montez, with lively dash and spirit.

The tiny red-haired girl with her bright eyes and quick-light feet her command of intricate steps and a complicated rhythm, could hardly have failed to impress an experienced theatrical manager. Lotta was now nearly eight years old, but she looked hardly six; to audiences eager to see children her diminutive size would prove an irresistible attraction.

The chances were strong that Dr. Robinson would have engaged Lotta then or later, when a difficulty arose with Mart Taylor. Robinson considered that Taylor asked too much for the use of his theater for an evening's performance, and decided to play in a dance hall across the road. By way of retaliation Taylor put on an entertainment of his own the same night with Lotta as a child star in opposition to Sue.

Mrs. Crabtree was obliged to make a hard decision. She had given up the boarding-house; she was ready to make a change. She had plenty of opportunity to reflect on the power of the witty and engaging Dr Robinson in San Francisco and elsewhere. Nor is it likely that he showed the effects of the recent rapid clashes in San Francisco among the theaters. Dr. Robinson never lost his high spirits and resilience

No doubt Lotta's rise to recognition would have been far easier and swifter if she had had him as a guide. But Mrs. Crabtree made a definite turning and took the more difficult road, obeying a passionate instinct to keep her child's career in her own hands.

With flying fingers she made Lotta a tiny long-tailed green coat, knee breeches, a tall green hat. Taylor cobbled her a pair of brogans. She came on the stage with a miniature shillelagh, pleased with her new costume and since she knew every one in the audience she was not shy. Casting aside the shillelagh, the absurd midget danced an Irish jig and a reel

She always had a way of laughing when she danced, hard enough to achieve by design when every breath counts, but natural for her She seemed tireless, a tiny bubbling fountain of fun and quick life. On the rough stage with candles for footlights, in the midst of smoke and shadows she danced again and again; every other number was forgotten even Taylor's dancing and singing. Then she appeared in a white dress with a round neck and puffed sleeves, and sang a plaintive, innocent ballad looking like a pretty little red-haired doll

The smoke-laden room was shaken with excitement. Money rained upon the stage; quarters, half dollars, huge Mexican dollars a $50 gold slug and a scattering of nuggets. The camp at Rabbit Creek had rallied round Taylor in the contest with Dr. Robinson, or had strolled into the theater as the applause thundered.

The Resourceful Little Doctor Was Defeated and Retired

The resourceful little doctor was defeated and retired leaving Mary Ann Crabtree to consider her child's success. She now possessed more money than she had had at any time in California. The next step seemed inevitable. She accepted Taylor's quick sketch of the luck which must come to a small traveling troupe, and while Crabtree was in the mountains learned to play that quaint instrument, the triangle

Taylor insisted that they must have plenty of music. He found a violinist and he himself could play the guitar. He taugh Lotta a further string of pretty ballads and a few appealing songs, like "How Can I Leave Thee?"

His own songs were parodies in the vein which Dr. Robinson had made popular by which the miners were betrayed into laughing at themselves. Taylor had a genuine gift for rhymed improvisation, and with a line or a question from his audience could throw almost any event into song.

A tall man, he looked the stroller, almost the troubadour, with hair as long and as jetty as the plumage of a Stockton blackbird, piercing black eyes, and an Oriental grace of figure and cast of countenance.

On a morning of late spring the new company started out in a wagon during one of Crabtree's absences Lotta was at her mother's side, Ashworth in her arms. Left behind in the cabin were some loaves of fresh bread, a pot of beans, and a note.

She was still a pretty woman, but the impervious air which she had always been able to assume had grown more definite during her two years in California. In joining Taylor and the violinist she had made a difficult choice. Even in the midst of the free standards of the coast women still drew an inevitable criticism. Mrs. Crabtree ignored the possibility.

One fancies her sitting bolt upright in the wagon with her children as she started out, with a look of neat inscrutability, bent only upon the new, precarious business of entertainment.

The camp at Rabbit Creek lay near the crossing of six trails, leading to the City of Seventy-six, Port Wine, Rich Line, Gibsonville, Quincy, Bidwell's Bar. The company went first in the direction of Quincy changing from the wagon to mules as they struck the high rugged trails.

Accoutred with red, blue and yellow tassels and trappings, the mules suggested a holiday journey. But for Mrs Crabtree at least there was terror in this change, as the beasts picked their way on tiny feet along dizzy precipices, following the leader's tinkling bell. Since mules were seldom skittish with women or even small girls if they were quiet, Lotta was strapped to the back of one of them. Mrs. Crabtree, carrying her small boy in her arms or holding him before her on the saddle, was also fastened in place to give her greater freedom with her child

By long halters each mule was tied to the one ahead. As the little procession skirted high cliffs along steep and narrow winding trails each rider often turned out of sight of the others.

Lotta, already accustomed to horses, became almost at once a fearless small rider and even learned to sleep in the saddle at night when the company was in haste to reach a new camp in time to make preparations for a coming performance The high mountain air was clear and exhilarating. In the late spring and early summer there was beauty both delicate and robust in these places, with white lilies and a drift of syringa, irises of many colors, and a fragrant flower like breaking clusters of seed-pearl, the Spanish lilia.

'No Stockings' Novel

ter all, if Lessing appeared at the party, he would spend some money and thus contribute to a worthy cause. . . .

Well, why lie to himself? That girl at the Casino, unworthy little thing that she was, had nevertheless pulled back curtains for him, and shown him vistas that might prove pleasurable. Must he be a drudge for 70 years merely because he had been one for 17? Out in the world was youth, gayety, laughter, soft lips and—stockingless legs, he chuckled, if one came right down to it. And even if the girl of the earlier evening had run away from him, still, she had remained with him long enough to receive his kiss and—return it. Perhaps he wasn't the sour-faced old curmudgeon that he had deemed himself. After all, he was only 35, and 35 was young

He turned abruptly away from contemplation of the gay scene before him. He was not dressed, and he felt embarrassment at passing through the guests in a blue serge suit. But there must be side entrances. He found one, guarded by a hard-faced man in a suit somewhat like Lessing's.

"Yeah. What do you want?" asked the hard-faced man.

"I'm a house-guest," he explained

"Is that so? And if I let every second-story man that called himself a house-guest in here tonight the fences would work overtime tomorrow," said the man.

"Detective?" asked Lessing.

"Greening operative," was the reply.

Lessing frowned. "Really? Is such a thing—I mean to say, is it necessary? At a party like this, where everyone is asked——"

"Asked? What do you mean, asked?" said the detective. "What the hell, feller, I'll bet there's two hundred people crashed the gate here tonight. They walk in with other people, they wear glad rags, the hostess thinks some friend of hers brought them—I'll say I'm needed. Me and other five that's scattered around. Now," and his voice grew truculent, "you say you're a house-guest? Well, if that's so, why're you sneaking in the back way, and why ain't you dolled up?"

Lessing Laughingly Explained That He Had Begged Off From Party

Lessing laughingly explained that he had begged off from the party, but now was returning home. A passing servant identified him, he complimented the detective upon his vigilance; they parted with mutual expressions of esteem, and Lessing was guided by the servant up a rear stairway and to his own room.

There, through windows that in the day commanded a view of the limitless ocean, Lessing could see couples entering and leaving the gaily colored tents. The music of the orchestra entered his blood, blood that had been aroused earlier tonight.

After all, Mrs. Carey had been very hospitable. Invited down to Newport because her husband's health made it inadvisable to take a trip to New York in the hot weather, Lessing had been made to feel at home. Bailey's Beach, the Clambake Club, the golf links—though he had not availed himself of the latter—had been thrown open to him. Carey, his most valuable client, whose good-will was more precious to him, had not forced his guest to do anything, but had offered him everything. It was ungracious not to attend a party merely because he might feel ill-at-ease. And why should he feel ill at ease? Not Mrs. Carey's attitude could account for that. It was simply because he had so long denied himself any social relationship that the mere thought of it terrified him.

But, earlier tonight, he had left the world of briefs, of judges, of decisions, and entered—though briefly—the bright world of flesh-and-blood, of laughing eyes and mocking lips, and had found that world good. But he knew himself, knew how introspective, how brooding he could be. Unless he dived into gayety tonight, he'd wind up by idealizing or by hating—and one was as bad as the other—the common little girl who had enthralled his senses at the Casino.

Drive her out of his mind! Dance with some other girl! It was not possible that girls of the class who gathered downstairs could be kissed at sight, but—kisses weren't necessary. He hadn't forgotten how to dance. Mrs. Carey would introduce him.

He dressed swiftly, went downstairs and found his hostess.

"It was very rude of me, Mrs Carey," he said, "not to want to come to your party. And I'm still rude, because I'm not here because I think I ought to be, but because the party looks so wonderful."

Mrs. Carey smiled. Lessing had said exactly the right thing. Two minutes later Lessing was dancing with a charming girl. Half an hour later he had danced with three charming girls had been introduced to a dozen more, and was apparently having the time of his life.

But he wasn't. He was bored, restless, miserable. It hadn't been company he wanted, it had been her company. It hadn't been dancing that he desired, it had been her dancing; it hadn't been girls that he craved; it had been one girl; it hadn't been kisses—though those he had not tried to gain—but her kiss.

And that company, that dancing, that girl, that kiss—where were they or she? Probably back in Fall River, or some other nearby city, smiling herself to sleep at recollection of the trick that had been played by her upon him. Tomorrow morning she would awaken, dress, go to the office or mill where [illegible] employed, and [illegible] with a tale of the [illegible] eluded last night

Damn her! Why had she [illegible] him to her side if she didn't want him there? Why had she requested his kiss if she did [illegible] it? Why had she returned that [illegible] if it had been unpleasant [illegible] Why had she intruded [illegible] youth, her beauty and her [illegible] into the life of a man who was [illegible] quite well without them [illegible]

His partner found [illegible]. As the music ceased, she [illegible] something, and left [illegible] solate, feeling completely out [illegible] picture, Lessing decided [illegible] bed. He could not recapture [illegible] —could never recapture that [illegible] ment when he had [illegible] in his arms, had felt [illegible] his own

And then [illegible]

Across the [illegible] marquee [illegible] in the [illegible] frock that she had worn earlier [illegible] corted by a [illegible] whose surrender to [illegible] was obvious.

Directly across [illegible], Lessing placed himself. Although he had changed his clothes [illegible] in surroundings so different as to seem another world, she, too, recognized him instantly.

She stopped, and over her features crept an expression that might have been embarrassment, that might have been fright.

"Hello," said Lessing grimly.

"Hello," she responded weakly.

The youth with her took advantage of the situation

"I say, sir," he said, "introduce me, won't you? She was in the tent there, and of course I thought we knew each other, and now it seems I don't—and she won't tell me her name."

"And if you haven't brains enough to find out who I am," said the girl "then you don't deserve to know me. So I think I'll not permit you to be introduced."

"But," almost wailed the youth 'I've pointed you out to 20 people and none of them know you"

"So," she said with severity, "you didn't accidentally meet me in the tent; you followed me."

She turned to Lessing. 'Shall we dance?" she asked.

Disconsolately, crushed—he was very young—the youth turned away.

Lessing stared at her. Three hours ago she had been in the public Casino. Now she was at the Carey's dance. How had she made that transition, a transition that could not be measured in a mile of space but that represented a generation of striving? And the youth had said that no one recognized her.

He thought of the detective's presence, of the detective's words, of the detective's reason for being here

Declarer realizes the impossibility of game by attempting to utilize Dummy's two remaining trumps for ruffing Hearts, as the adversaries are sure to block such procedure by leading trumps. Declarer's only hope for game is therefore in the establishment of Dummy's Clubs.

Since Declarer cannot avoid the lose of at least one Club trick, he allows it to make at once by leading a small Club from Dummy's hand as the first step towards the establishment of the suit.

West, winning with the 10 of Clubs, switches to Diamonds, leading the King and following with a small Diamond. East wins the second Diamond trick with the Ace.

East in the lead at Trick 5, reasons that Declarer must hold at least one more Club, in which case a lead of Clubs by Declarer through West and a finesse of the Queen will capture the King marked in West's hand, and result in the establishment of the suit.

To block Declarer's evident plan, in case Declarer has but one Club remaining, East leads a Club to remove Declarer's before trumps can be drawn. This Club lead saved game.

Declarer, winning with Dummy's Queen, immediately led the Ace and overtrumped East. Thereafter Declarer could make no use of Dummy's remaining Clubs, and so cross ruffed the hand but the last trick fell to West's 10 of trumps and stopped game.

HELPING SLOW CHILD

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

FROM the time that small Billy had first tried to put on his rubbers by himself he had been regaled with the comment: "Billy is so slow!"

Billy had looked up at his mother inquiringly, had seen the disgusted little quirk to her pretty mouth and had sighed and patiently continued trying to pull the rubbers over his shoes.

More and more often as he grew older he saw that hopelessly discouraged look on mother's face, and he came to the conclusion that he was different from every other child in the world, that he was a born inferior to his playmates. So after a few years he merely ceased trying to keep up with his companions. What was the use? He was slow, and being slow was something terribly disgraceful. That he could tell by the expression on mother's face.

Often in slow responses of children there is a physical cause. This Billy's mother looked into carefully and found that he was in excellent physical condition. It was simply a slow executing of whatever he desired to do, and Billy was called by his parents "just plain lazy."

Billy wasn't lazy. He wanted, oh, so much, to find and "tag" his playmates when "hide-and-go-seek" was in process, but they always sneaked in, touched goal, and he was again "it." He always thought how to work out a puzzle just a few minutes after one of his companions had glibly shouted the correct solution.

He was slow and lazy, everybody said so. Therefore he guessed he was, and he stopped trying to speed up.

All Billy's life he had been pushed. What Billy needed was a few gentle PULLS, mental pulls, a few "pullings out" of ideas which really interested him, and kind encouragement as he painfully worked them out.

A kindly kindergarten teacher probably saved Billy from being one of the world's adult failures by understanding what he needed. She said nothing about his being slow. When he showed a bit [illegible] ment in completing his work she said "Billy was [illegible] time to play with the blocks today, he finished his drawing [illegible] nicely and quickly, too." That was all.

The teacher visited his home and suggested that he be given a lively puppy. In his play and romps with the puppy he of necessity moved quickly. With the [illegible] and help of the teacher, the [illegible] of the animal and [illegible] parents telling him [illegible] slow and lazy, Billy gradually [illegible] he was supposed to be [illegible] and swung into stride with the rest.

You cannot prod a slow child into activity, but you can lure him into it by offering something which will interest him.

FIREBALLS IN THE SKY

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"It was my good fortune to witness a most wonderful sight this morning at 2:15 a. m. A shooting star very bright and large, traveling rather slow, came into view high up in the heavens and followed a course toward the northwest. It had a very long, bright tail, and when about 25 degrees from the horizon vanished, but the tail hung suspended for some minutes before it gradually faded away. I wish you would explain what it was and what caused the tail to hang suspended so long.—Denis J. Warren.

IT WAS a good fortune, indeed, for you have witnessed one of those sights which nature only occasionally furnishes to the inhabitants of this little earth, and which glow in the memory. Happy are they and greatly favored by the gods who see things in the heavens. Some glimpse them with the eye, but do not see them with the mind. For them they are mere accidental sparks whose nature and origin are not worth inquiring about. When the mind really "captures" a meteor, it is as when an atom captures an electric charge, and thereby becomes an ion, endowed with marvelous new powers, a "goer" in the universe of matter.

From your description of the brightness of this meteor I should say that it was one of those sporadic apparitions usually called "fireballs." The ordinary "shooting star" or meteor is relatively faint and seldom leaves any visible trail; at least, none lasting so long as that which you saw. These trails, however, are sometimes seen in the track of a fireball, or meteorite, and there are a few instances on record in which they have remained visible for many minutes, seeming to drift in air currents, and changing form like floating serpents. They are composed primarily, it is believed, of heated gases expelled from the meteoric body as it rushes through the air at a speed of many miles per second. But, owing to the long continuance of the visibility of some of these trails, it is supposed that electric ionization plays a part in the emission of their light.

You speak of the "slowness" of the motion. This is another indication that the object was a meteorite (fireball) rather than a simple meteor. Owing to air resistance the velocity of these bodies, which is very high in outer space, becomes rapidly reduced and velocities as low as about nine miles per second have been measured. Since the velocity may be as great as forty-five miles per second outside the atmosphere, the reduction to one-fifth of that speed indicates that the body must have passed through many miles of air. The slowing down has sometimes been noticeable to observers. Fireballs may, at the end of their course, and after their light has seemed to die out like that of a choked candle, lose all of their original motion, and so drop to the earth under the force of gravity alone.

By that time small ones have been reduced to dust, but considerable masses of large meteorites may strike the earth with great force, burying themselves in the soil, or being shattered on rocks. We can never be too thankful that we have atmosphere spread like a domed shield over our heads by day and night, for if there were no air resistance to be overcome, even the tiniest meteoric bodies—though no larger than grains of sand—would plunge down upon the earth at lightning speed, and with a penetrative power proportioned to the square of their velocity. Since many millions of these bodies are believed to strike into the atmosphere every twenty-four hours, the protective function of the latter becomes startlingly evident.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

By TEMPLE MANNING

PASSENGER-CARRYING liners plying between the United States and South American ports rarely stop at Bahia, Brazil. Bahia is not a place to which many tourists turn their steps, while commercial travelers covering the Bahia territory usually reach it by coastwise boats from Rio de Janeiro.

But, despite its inaccessibility, or because of it, Bahia is one of the most charming "old-world" cities on the east coast of South America. And one of the oldest cities. It was the capital of Brazil during the days of the empire.

Bahia, one of the best harbors of eastern South America, is situated just south of the "nose" of Brazil, that promontory which juts out into the Atlantic just below the estuary of the Amazon River.

The commercial part of the city extends along the waterfront back to the bluffs, on top of which is the residential section. It is in the lower city that the main plaza, with its government buildings, the postoffice and many business houses, is located.

Communication between the lower and upper cities is by means of two elevators, a circular tramway and steep, zig-zag cobbled streets. Up and down these streets go the mule carts, while naked native youngsters dart here, there and everywhere. While Bahia, like the rest of Brazil, was founded by the Portuguese, among the natives are to be found many negroes and native Indian half-bloods from the interior.

One of the sights of Bahia is the old church, built, it is said, soon after the founding of the city by Thome de Souza in 1549. This church was one of the strongholds of Catholicism in Brazil and through its influence Bahia finally became the metropolis of the church in Brazil.

From the bluffs, which rise to a height of 260 feet, one is able to view the coastline of Brazil for miles, both to the north and south. On a clear day the fleecy clouds hanging in a brilliant blue sky above the dark blue ocean, the waves breaking on the narrow beach, combine to form a picture worthy the brush of any master.

REINVESTMENT DAYS DRAWING NEARER

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Reinvestment days are drawing nearer—"14 days to the end of the year," warns the calendar. And January 1 is popularly supposed to start the month of reinvestment. Shall we reinvest and will we? Two questions in one. Wall Street writers evidently think we will, for they are getting out "reinvestment" data. Perhaps they are mistaken.

* * *

Some time during the year just fading a great change came over the American public. The appetite for investment dwindled and the appetite for speculation grew. It used to be necessary—in the minds of some—only to have been "called" to a certain Greek letter society to be able to sell bonds. For months even that has not been working any too well. What next? Who knows? Styles in finance appear to be changing as rapidly as those in Milady's behavior and attire.

* * *

From the ministry to the financial world is an unusual step. It was taken by A. E. Fitkin, public utilities millionaire. The latest example is Dr. Robert Orville Matthews, who was a Methodist preacher back in [illegible]909. Now he is president of the Airway Limited and vice-president of Airway Electric Appliance Corp. Annual salary, $75,000. I wonder how many ministers get as large a salary per annum? Because we ask this question, don't make the common mistake of thinking success is to be measured by dollars. Mr. Fitkin has returned to the public utilities [illegible] after temporary retirement [illegible] mostly in Europe.

[illegible] Matthews is a former college [illegible]ident. The list of ex-presidents [illegible] colleges and one-time professors [illegible] have risen in the financial [illegible] would be a long one, if com[illegible]

[illegible] du Pont de Nemours and Co., [illegible] known as du Pont, moves [illegible] the trend in changing its [illegible] from no par to $20 par with [illegible] newly authorized 13,500,000-share [illegible] The great majority of cor[illegible]ons are changing from par to [illegible]

[illegible] a leading New England [illegible] concern I have a definition [illegible] for the Christmas season. It [illegible] of sterling silver. The first [illegible] of sterling silver on rec[illegible] comes from a book printed in [illegible] in 1677. The author, signing himself merely "W. B." says: [illegible] silver consists of an ad[illegible] of 18 dwt. (pennyweights) [illegible] with 11 ounces, 2 dwt. of [illegible] This standard has prevailed [illegible] day. Sterling silver is 92½ [illegible] pure silver, 7½ per cent [illegible] the latter added to harden the silver and to insure long wear.

[illegible] never a prominent industrial[illegible] has a sketch of his life prepared for publication he is apt to [illegible] it up with a list of the "clubs" [illegible]hich he belongs. One of the [illegible] railroad leaders in the East, [illegible]ssing this with the writer the [illegible] day, concluded it was due [illegible] to the influence of a nationally-[illegible]own biographical annual than to actual importance.

National Safety Council's study of automobile accidents shows that [illegible] of 50,000 were caused by [illegible] who did not have the right [illegible] way. Only 7000 were caused by [illegible] and but 4000 by "cutting in." If these figures are found to [illegible] true as reasonable averages, [illegible] ought to cause a change in [illegible] methods of trying to make [illegible] roads safe.

[illegible] should be made for violators of [illegible] of way" regulations, and [illegible] chiefly pushed along [illegible] since this is the chief [illegible] of accidents. Connecticut does [illegible] any speed limit, and the [illegible] works well there, [illegible] the enforced regulation [illegible] slow traffic must keep to the right.

[illegible] never heard of a motorist [illegible] prosecuted in New England for committing the offence assigned by the National Safety Council as [illegible] cause of accidents. The [illegible] leading cause of accidents, according to the Council, was "drivers failing to signal their intentions to cars behind." There is no law here compelling drivers to give such signals. Thus two of the chief causes of accidents have in the past been for the most part ignored. Safety of the highways and the free, rapid flow of transportation are essential not only for the general welfare but also specially for the continuance and growth of industrial prosperity.

The great automotive industry, biggest of all in the world, has been singularly indifferent to enactment of correct traffic regulatory legislation, so essential to its welfare.

Most of the big traders in Wall st. are resting on their oars for the time being. The big smash which carried all prices downward in the week of December 8 came with such dramatic suddenness that there was not much time to sell stocks to the general public at the peak price levels and for that reason another sharp rally, probably led by the railroad stocks, is looked for in some parts of Wall st. Not until after the turn of the year, however, will much of an effort be made to turn the tide of prices upward, according to the best informed people. A drifting and "churning" market from now until the first week in January is on the cards, by the word of the Wall st. soothsayers.

How many of the outside public traders who rushed pell mell into the market to share in the "Hoover boom" are still "in Wall st."? That question was discussed in the brokerage houses today as a check up of the records showed that thousands of small accounts had been wiped out in the big hurricane of December 6-7-8. At least the attitude of the small traders is more conservative than ever, but as a rule the lessons of a bear market are soon forgotten and the public rushes back as eagerly as ever.

The bears have already started to worry about next year's motor car business, forecasting a 5,000,000-car output, with a market for only 3,000,000 cars; result, sharp competition, price-cutting and small profits.

Detroiters Made Killing; What Motor Men Are Doing

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—The Detroiter who swings larger blocks of stocks than any other citizen—and that is saying a lot—is still bullish. But he doesn't look for renewal of the upward movement until after the new year. He rather fears that the Wall Street money market will be subjected to fireworks this month and perhaps in the first few days of January.

B. C. Forbes

The recent sudden relapse did not take him by surprise. He had reached the conclusion just before the break came that the market had become tired and was ready to show signs of fatigue.

Irregularity, incited by stiffening money rates, is what he looks for this month.

But shortly after New Year he looks for a substantial recovery in the most promising stocks.

Stock speculation has taken hold of Detroit as never before. Many have done extraordinarily well because, naturally, Detroiters have favored motor and motor equipment stocks. Some of the advances have yielded fortunes. Look at these gains, for example:

	Year Low	W'kend Price	Gain
Auburn Auto	80	127	47
Briggs Mfg	21	45	24
Budd	15	35	20
Chandler-Cleve	5	20	15

I hear, however, that many smaller speculators have been wiped out.

Every motor manufacturer I have met is looking forward confidently to 1929, following, in most instances, record-breaking results during the current year.

The Fishers, who are extremely important interests in General Motors, are very optimistic over the outlook for the various car manufacturing divisions. Lawrence P. Fisher, president of the Cadillac and La Salle companies, after describing the gains made this year by General Motors plants, said he expects even bigger achievements all along the line next year. The new six-cylinder Chevrolet has proved an instantaneous success at one end of the price range, while Cadillac-LaSalle is prospering at the other end of the range.

Alvan Macauley, president of Packard, is making important additions to his productive facilities in an effort to catch up with the greatest avalanche of orders this company has ever enjoyed. Detroit is quite as optimistic as Wall Street over Packard's prospects.

Important developments are pending in Chrysler activities, covering both passenger cars and trucks. Details, however, will not be announced until the opening of the year. Walter P. Chrysler is figuring upon greatly increasing his share of the business in 1929.

C. W. Mathewson, who after five years is again at the sales helm of Dodge Brothers, told me: "We have been hearing a lot about public interest in style. That is true; but the manufacturer who thinks the buying public does not understand engineering trends and manufacturing methods will find his product in a declining maket. I have returned to Dodge Brothers after eight months devoted to the introduction of the DeSoto Six. In both cases—the one a new car, the other a car of nearly 15 years' standing—I find success based on recognition of engineering leadership, on comprehension of manufacturing skill and processes, on ultimate dollar value."

Things are humming at the Ford works. The payroll, which has already passed all earlier high-water marks, will, it is said, rise still further as production advances toward the goal aimed at.

Graham-Paige has been spending several millions on plant expansion and have increased their dealer organization from 350 last year to over 2000.

NEWBURYPORT IS LEADER IN SAVINGS

A few days ago figures appeared showing the tremendous increase in savings throughout the United States and crediting Massachusetts with having the highest per capita savings in the country, the amount being $618 per inhabitant.

Even more interesting is the fact that the per capita savings in certain Massachusetts cities as reported by the mutual savings banks of the State exceed the State average materially. Figures obtained from the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts and based solely on the savings in the mutual savings banks of Massachusetts cities indicate that the per capita savings for Newburyport exceed those of the State by $472 per inhabitant. Salem citizens average $269 apiece better than those in other cities, while in Fitchburg the excess is $216.

The following figures give the per capita savings of each of the cities in the State, it being understood that only deposits in mutual savings banks are considered.

NEW GATINEAU DAM PROJECT

Gatineau Power Co., controlled by Canadian Hydro-Electric Corporation—a subsidiary of International Paper Co.—has commenced construction of another storage dam on the Gatineau River in the Province of Quebec. Work will be carried on throughout the winter and it is expected that the dam will be completed and ready for operation next summer.

The new dam—storing the waters of Lake Cabonga—and the present Mercier storage dam will form reservoirs ranking with the large water-storage systems of the world.

Instalment Sales Are Seen as Sound

The practice of instalment selling, says the United Business Service in its current weekly report, has apparently established itself as a permanent feature of American distribution. It is generally admitted that the principle of instalment selling is sound as applied to producers' goods. It is obviously sound economy to buy on the time-payment plan a machine, the use of which will cut down costs and save more than its purchase price.

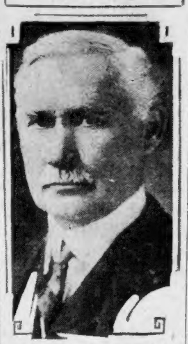
Cotton Is Mixed

New York, Dec. 18 (INS)—Cotton was irregular today at a decline of 2 points to an advance of 4 points. December sold at 20.37, January 20.12, March 20.24, May 20.18, July 19.85 and October 19.44.

FIRST National Bank of Boston has been appointed Boston transfer agent for common stock of American Founders Corp.

CHICOPEE awarded $100,000 loan due Nov. 15, 1929, to Third National Bank & Trust Co. of Springfield at 4.475 per cent.

Busy Banker



GEORGE E. ROBERTS
Vice-president of National City Bank of N. Y., ex-comptroller of treasury, engaged on economic survey for Panama government.

National Biscuit Up $5 at Opening

National Biscuit and National Bellas Hess each opened up $5 a share in New York Stock Exchange trading today. The market generally was higher.

Freeport Texas added over $3 a share, as did also Interboro Rapid Transit. Hess later extended its gain to above $7 a share, topping yesterday's advance of over $16 a share.

Kennecott was up $1 a share. U. S. Industrial Alcohol added over $1 a share.

Wall Street Gossip

BURLINGTON handled 75,383 revenue freight cars in first 13 days of December, against 73,584 in same 1927 period.

ROCK ISLAND handled 71,735 revenue freight cars in week ended December 14, against 71,041 last month and 66,565 last year.

SYMINGTON Co. reports nine months' net after taxes of $154,387, against $239,094 a year ago. Third quarter net was $30,079, against $80,959 a year ago.

GASOLINE prices average 19.97 cents a gallon in 10 principal marketing cities against 20.27 cents in preceding week and 19.05 cents in like week in 1927.

SALES of Jewel Tea Company, Inc., of Chicago, in the four weeks ended December 1 increased to $1,370,971 from $1,243,653 in like 1927 period.

STRUTHERS Iron & Steel Company's furnace at Youngstown has made its first cast after a year of idleness and has enough merchant iron booked to operate six months.

WHILE midwest steel industry is maintaining operations at better than 80 per cent of capacity, there will be some rolling mill suspensions next week for year-end repairs.

Christmas Shoppers Put Temporary Strain on Banks

WITH the temporary mid-month easement in the money market over, market for the remainder of the month will be subjected to further seasonal strain.

Currency withdrawals by Christmas shoppers has precisely the same effect on the credit supply as the loss of gold, for member banks must replenish their depleted holdings of till money by drawing against their reserve balances at the Federal Reserve Banks. A reduction in reserve does not mean a corresponding contraction of member bank credit, but theoretically a reduction or ten times the amount in member bank credit which is available for purposes of business and speculation.

Ordinarily, such seasonal peaks in currency withdrawals are offset by open market operations of the Federal Reserve system. Since early Autumn the Federal Reserve has actively pumped additional credit into the market through increased purchases of acceptances, but with the seasonal peak in agriculture and in primary industry behind, the Federal Reserve has recently been modifying its course. It was reluctant to increase the credit supply unduly as long as stock speculation was rampant.

The putting of the brakes on bull speculation in securities, with a reduction of $218,839,000 in brokers' loans last week will tend to mitigate the strain on the money market for the rest of the month. In January, seasonal factors usually operate to ease the money market, with a return flow of currency to the banks and a reduction in bank loans.

Usually before all holidays currency withdrawals from the banks are heavy, as depositors take funds to resorts to pay expenses. Before Christmas the demand for currency reaches a peak as the people shop extensively, buying gifts for others and seasonable merchandise for themselves. If the currency were immediately spent and redeposited in the banks, the withdrawals would have little effect on the credit situation. But it is the custom of the average person to walk around with more cash in his pocket than usual during the next week or so. This trait has repercussions in the stock market and elsewhere.

Dispatches recently referred to the fact that bankers were planning to attack the validity of the bank guaranty law in the courts in Nebraska, where the fantastic legal experiment was making its last stand. A reader in Independence, Iowa, who believes in the principle of the guaranty law, asks whether bank depositors should have no other safeguards than they now have. Dan V. Stephens, president of the Fremont State Bank, of Fremont, Neb., who is active in the fight against the guaranty law, answers this question, saying: "There isn't any question but depositors should have safeguards, and that is exactly what we are trying to give them. The only reason we haven't been able to give them these safeguards long ago has been the politician, who has stood like a stone wall against the restriction of bank charters and who has insisted on keeping the Banking Department in politics.

"Restrict the number of banks to one for every 4000 or 5000 population and establish an independent banking board made up of bankers in control of the supervision of the banks, and there will be a protection given the depositors that will be second to none, but so long as the politicians think that banks should be put upon the same basis as grocery stores and thereby subjected to the law of the 'survival of the fittest,' just so long will the process give us bank failures, and the losses will naturally fall upon the depositors directly and upon the communities where the banks are located indirectly."

There are indications that the banking systems of the agrarian states, which have been through a difficult period of post-war readjustment, are turning the corner.

In viewing the longer term outlook for American business, it is short-sighted to focus attention on the lack of immediate shortages. There is still an abundance of constructive jobs that await the expenditure of American capital, energy and foresight. The Pennsylvania Railroad, in disclosing plans to electrify its main line from New York to Washington, has opened up new vistas for the business imagination. The building up of the country is far from completed. Prosperity need not end because of a lack of attractive projects which would contribute substantially to the national economy. In the interest of uninterrupted employment of labor, it would be well if such constructive programs could be co-ordinated and planned long in advance.

BRITISH FORD SHARES SELL ON N. Y. CURB

British Ford shares made their appearance on the New York Curb today for the first time. Ford of Canada shares have long been sold on the New York Curb, but the American Ford shares, owned by Henry Ford and family, are never sold.

Ford Motor Co., Ltd., sold initially on the Curb Market today at 9⅞, for 10,000 shares, against the offering price of 1 pound (about $4.85) a share.

Prices were generally irregular with Wire Wheel up 1¼ at 29⅝ and Newmont Mining down ¼ at 191¾.

Continental Oil was up ⅛ at 19 3-4 and United Gas & Improvement down ⅞ at 151¼.

Electric Bond & Share advanced ½ to 148.

BROKERS GIVE MARKET VIEWS

F. B. Keech & Co. say: "We believe that it is a time for the greatest conservatism."

Jas. H. Oliphant & Co. say: "The idea is almost unanimously accepted that nothing will happen in the stock market until January, except, perhaps, some dribbling liquidation. It would be surprising for nearly everybody to be right. Apprehension over tight money in the remaining days of December may soon give way to some anticipation of easier rates and investment demand in January. Huge amounts are distributed to investors at the end of the year and usually there is a tendency to make some purchases in advance. This should mean support for high quality stocks."

In predicting further stock loan contraction during the next few months, Hornblower & Weeks in their December Investment Review express the belief that, "while fundamentals in the main part continue favorable, it is doubtful if such loan contraction as has occurred is of sufficient proportion to place the market in a position to renew its broad advancing tendencies of early autumn." They also state that, "subject to rallies which in themselves may appear to resemble a main resumption, we would expect further substantial loan contraction during the next few months." As to the bond market, they believe that until monetary conditions become more stabilized little, if any, strength can be expected in bond prices.

Auto Parts Company Offering Is Near

Offering will be made in the near future of 50,000 shares the Columbus Auto Parts Company convertible cumulative preference stock, of no par value, by Hemphill, Noyes & Co. and R. V. Mitchell & Co. The stock has been purchased from individuals and represents no new financing for the company. The Columbus Auto Parts Company supplies some of the largest automobile manufacturers in the United States with parts used in the steering mechanism of automobiles.

For the first nine months of 1928 net profits, after charges and taxes, were four and one-half times dividend requirements on this issue and equivalent to $2.69 a share on the common stock presently to be outstanding.

Cotton Stockings Still Find Market

Popular theory that the cotton stocking is a thing of the past is refuted by the record of the Adams-Millis Corp., whose stock was recently listed on the New York Stock Exchange. This company has plants with a capacity of 4,000,000 dozen pairs of hosiery per annum. The greater part of its business is confined to a stocking that sells at 25 cents a pair retail. Its other hosiery products sell for 20 to 50 cents a pair retail. This tremendous output of cotton hosiery is marketed through chain stores, which take approximateely 75 per cent of the company's output. About one-half of the output is men's cotton hose.

OFFICIAL'S HOME BOMBED

Chicago, Dec. 18 (INE)—A black powder bomb today damaged the home of Lawrence F. King, senior member of the sanitary district board. The front porch was blown away and windows within a radius of several blocks were shattered by the blast.

King and his five children, four of whom are girls, were in bed at the time. All escaped injury.

The sanitary district trustee, who is also committeeman of this ward, blamed "politics" for the attack on his home. He said he had no personal enemies that he knew of.

A political flurry was caused recently by publication of the sanitary board's payroll, on which appeared the names of many prominent politicians.

Safe-Breakers Flee Charlestown Plant

Safe-breakers smashed the combination off the strong box in the office of the Charles Holyoke Lumber Company, Medford st., Charlestown, early today, but were frightened away before they opened the door. The break was discovered by Patrolman Cahill, who found the rear door forced. The burglars who took $88 from the Hollywood Theater safe last week are suspected.

POOR SINGING TECHNIQUE MARS RADIO

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

THE AMERICAN ACADEMY of Arts and Letters is doing a splendid thing in encouraging, by means of gold medal awards, the use of good idiomatic English and clear diction by radio announcers. This should be followed up by the organized musicians of the country with awards for like proficiency in the field of song.

OFF PITCH

IT MUST BE AMAZING to a foreigner to listen to some of our most energetic radio performers. Gradually a singing technique is being developed in this country which is violently at variance with all standards of good taste, intelligence and effectiveness. One of the most pernicious habits of radio singers, borrowed, perhaps, from some of the lesser lights of small time vaudeville, is that of singing around the tone. There seems to be little thought given to clear attack and to true pitch. The singer scoops up to the tone and then falls off a full half tone before proceeding to the next. There is one baritone singer regularly heard on a local commercial broadcast who does this thing to distraction. His voice is of naturally good quality, but he has permitted himself to get into the habit of moaning his phrases, with the result that hardly a single note in his entire broadcast remains true. This sort of thing tends to alienate real music lovers from radio and to create false standards of appreciation on the part of the untutored listener.

NEED RESERVE FORCE

CONSTANT radio listening creates another impression of our radio singers. This is that very few of them have the stamina which real singers require. It is somewhat unfortunate that radio amplifying apparatus makes it possible to place a singer endowed with the tiniest sort of voice before the micriphone, and to send forth roars of any desired volume. This has created a false idea of security on the part of broadcasters. Even though volume can be magnified, there still remains the inescapable evidence of poor technique and mediocre vocal equipment. A singer needs substance, reserve power, poise. Jean de Reszke, one of the world's greatest teachers of the voice, used to get down on the floor of his studio before his pupils. He would take a breath and then invite them to stand on his abdomen. His addominal strength was remarkable. He could withstand powerful blows like a prizefighter. The great women singers have vast reserves of breath and muscular power to back up the tones of the voice. This is needed, even in the lightest kind of vocalizing. Our radio singers, however, are in large part, content with shallow tones, without the vibrant ring which comes with perfect execution.

DAUGHTER OF OTIS SKINNER

ONE OF THE CLEVEREST personalities to be heard these days on the radio is Cornelia Otis Skinner, who comes to the Eveready Hour tonight through WEEI at 9 o'clock. This talented daughter of a talented father delighted Bostonians when she appeared in recital some months ago at the Statler Hotel. Her character sketches are ful of vitality and humor, and, best of all, they are the product of her own pen. Miss Skinner studied at Bryn Mawr and later at the Sorbonne in Paris. Her dramatic training was at the hands of Jean Herve, associate of the Comedie Francaise, and Jasques Copeau, director of the unique Theatre du Vieux Colombier.

NEW WBZ FEATURE

WBZ WILL BRING a new program to local listeners from New York with the introduction of the Savannah Liners' Orchestra at 6:30 tonight.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

THE BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN is going to present to radio listeners one of the most elaborate Christmas programs in history next Monday night, Christmas Eve, through WBZ and WBZA. The famous Paulist Choir, under the direction of Fr. Finn, will sing old carols whose words and music will be contained in a special supplement to be issued with the Evening American. Dr. S. Parks Cadman will speak, and there will be an elaborate program of instrumental music and frequent playing of the Trinity Church (New York) chimes. Special broadcasting apparatus will be installed in Copley sq. in the open, and at other localities which will be announced in the news columns.

PUBLICITY MAN SUCCUMBS TO OPERATION

Worcester, Dec. 18—Walter S. Duggan, widely-known theatrical publicity man and former Worcester newspaperman, is dead in Chicago from pneumonia, following an operation for appendicitis, according to information received here today by his mother, Mrs. John T. Duggan, widow of a former mayor of this city.

Duggan died at the American hospital, Chicago.

At the time of death he was Western representative of the Selwyn theatrical interests. For five years, just prior to the World War, he was personal representative of George M. Cohan.

He enlisted and served as a color sergeant in the 81st Division in France and was one of the few men mustered out in that country, in order that he might accept a position as publicity manager of the London Hippodrome.

Among the widely-known theatrical stars whose publicity he handled were Elsie Janis, Jane Cowl, Leon Errol and Raymond Hitchcock.

DEATHS

HOLMES—In Chelsea, Dec. 17th, Charles H. Holmes. Funeral from his late residence, 66 Harvard St., Friday, Dec. 21st, at 2:30 p. m. Relatives and friends invited. Please omit flowers.

LARGEST EVENING
CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND

The East Boston Tunnel

A Project So Big and So Important Must Be Built in the Right Way.

The reasons stated by Mayor Nichols early in the month for his opposition to the East Boston Tunnel bill in its present form seemed to us to be good and sufficient at the time and—notwithstanding the insinuations of His Excellency the Governor—seem so now.

The act of 1928 created a Boston Tunnel Commission, which was to do the work.

"WHY?" asked the Mayor, "when we have the Boston Transit Department, which in thirty years has constructed tunnels and subways valued at more more than $50,000,000?"

It was Mr. Nichols' opinion, he said in his Hotel Statler address, that the Transit Department could build the East Boston Tunnel at a net saving of $45,000 a year.

The NEW commission, according to the mayor, could not be maintained at less than $70,000, which is approximately the annual cost of the Transit Department. HE would allot the Transit Board $25,000 more, for its work on the East Boston project, and thus save $45,000.

Mr. Nichols made one other forceful objection to the Tunnel act of 1928:

> "Takings of land under this act fall under the General Laws, which give to the property owner the right of having his damages determined by a Suffolk County jury. The city, through its Law Department and Street Commission, has an experienced organization for handling this difficult problem in the interest of the taxpayer. The NEW commission would have to create a law and claims department of its own, at an expense apparently overlooked in Chapter 380."

The Boston Evening American is not keenly interested in any quarrel or rivalry between Alvan T. Fuller and Malcolm E. Nichols, or the men who surround or support either or both.

It is the opinion of THIS newspaper that Mr. Fuller is one of the ablest and squarest Governors Beacon Hill has known.

It also is the opinion of the Boston Evening American that Malcolm Nichols is a good mayor, and that he has grown to be a BETTER mayor with each passing month.

The Boston Evening American wants the East Boston Tunnel built, and as speedily as possible. East Boston and its people have been neglected long enough. To thousands of persons in the city proper the district is an Unknown Country in which even the politician has shown little interest.

But we cannot forget that Nichols, then chairman of the Transit Department, advocated the building of this tunnel SEVEN YEARS AGO.

He believes in it, still. Its operation "promises to be successful," he told his Statler audience, and "upon its ultimate success there appears to be no difference of opinion."

The mayor's objection is not to the tunnel, but to certain provisions of the act as passed. An amendment or two, a small injection of the spirit of Home Rule, and he can save the taxpayers $45,000 a year.

It seems to us the Governor who built a cancer hospital by NOT erecting a Massachusetts building at Philadelphia's Sesquicentennial ought to be the first to applaud the mayor who would pull BOSTON'S purse-strings tighter.

Mr. Fuller suspects that some of the politicians who have been telling him goodbye would be glad to prescribe a trip around the world for him, a slow journey, and preferably a walking tour.

We do not feel like that, at all.

WE hope that after a brief vacation the scrappy Governor, chock full of pep, will be right back in the midst of things.

A Little Boy's Question

"Will You Have a Job NEXT Christmas, Papa?"

One person out of every ten in America suffers want. Three of every ten live in poverty.

A Boston man, Executive Secretary Robert Wilson Kelso of the Council of Social Agencies, made these statements in New York last week at a dinner of the Children's Aid Society.

The speaker went on to emphasize his point that more and more, in this mechanical age, we have need of one another and every man is our "neighbor." Said Mr. Kelso:

> "Our mechanical industrial system has brought a new crisis. Where in that older economy we were an aggregation of persons, each demanding and securing almost complete independence, we now find ourselves living so close together, so greatly in danger of the diseases carried by others, each harmed so deeply by the wrongdoing of others, that we must in self-defense throw in our lot together and build a defense system for society."

We quote Mr. Kelso because, with no knowledge as to the source of his figures, we KNOW that in a season which ought to be the gladdest in the year there IS considerable want around us.

The cartoonists get to the point of a story much more quickly than the writers of editorials. One of them turned out a picture a day or two ago in which a man and a little boy were hurrying past a brilliantly lighted shop window filled with toys. The man's coat collar was turned up. His hands were in the pockets. The little boy was asking him. "Do you think you will have a job NEXT Christmas, Papa?"

There ARE men out of work in Greater Boston, many men, good men. There ARE little boys who ask questions. There are breadwinners in the hospitals. There are poor homes from which the big black wagon was driven away only yesterday. There are little children——

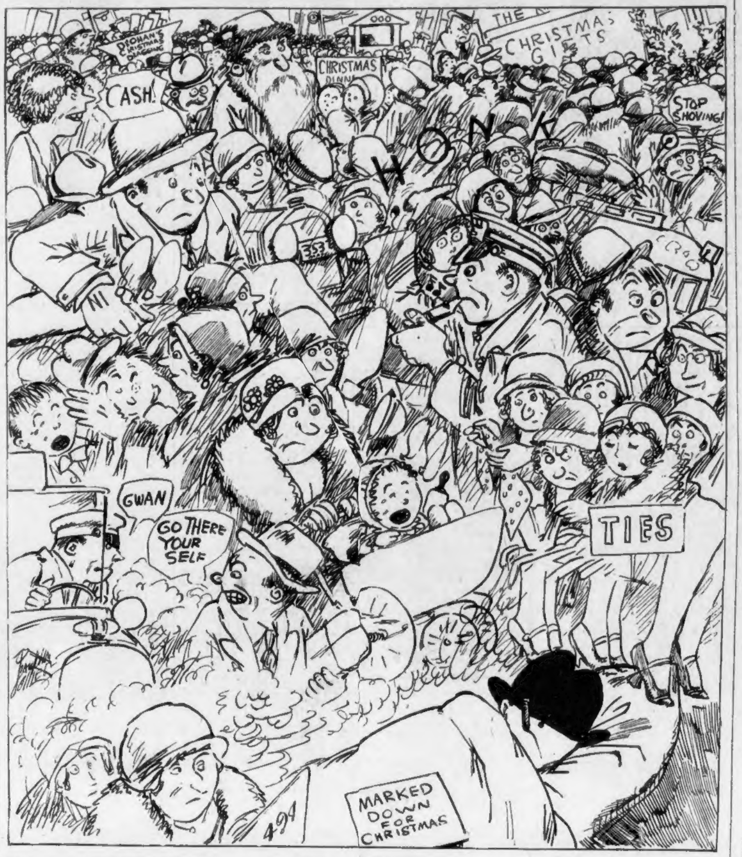
What would you LIKE to do?

The Goodfellow Editor of the Boston Evening American will be glad to give you—in confidence—the address of some needy family in your own part of the Greater city, in order that in this one case you may represent the busy gentleman we know as Mr. Santa Claus. If you cannot find the time to go in person, on Christmas Eve or Christmas morning, the Goodfellow Editor will act for you.

BE a Goodfellow.

Otto's Annual Christmas Dream -:-

By FRANKLIN COLLIER



New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 18—Save at the Metropolitan opera, the hired claque is almost a memory. In the theater there was only one evidence of the horny-handed pests this season. When the Metropolitan gives them the air—and it should pronto—amusement lovers will offer prayerful thanks.

Their vulgar and ostentatious outbursts at opera has been an insult to the intelligence of patrons for years. In the theater the claque was not so annoying. It was mostly friends of the players and producers and not disturbers hired for so much a night.

Nevertheless it was all a pain in the neck. It was not unusual for applause at a theater to hold up a show for five minutes just to pay tribute to someone whose part was encompassed in the line : "Madam will receive you." Opening performances ran until after midnight. A Follies premiere once lasted until 3 a. m.

Theatrical performances are now timed to the split second. It is a heavy expense otherwise. On opening nights the performance may run 10 or 15 minutes overtime, but rarely longer. After the first showing a first class play runs as smoothly as a well-regulated watch.

In other days "stealing a bow" was an elegant sop to the actor's vanity. There were some who would carry a banjo to the footlights to give a fake idea they could play it just for an extra bow. It was so irritatingly overdone that a storm of applause trailed off into an outbreak of hisses.

In musical comedies and revues today encores are rarely permitted. And a single bow is the limit. To frustrate all this foolishness, producers provide a quick change at high speed and the show toddles merrily on. All of which is tough on the performer but dandy for customers.

In dramas, the curtain is often lifted after the second act so players may receive their accolade and the assemblage on the stage is thinned down until the star or featured players take their cherished bow alone. The old time curtain speech is restricted to first nights.

A HOTEL snooper discovers, after an investigation of 100 New York hotels, that the smallest dining room in each is invariably the best patronized. Another example of the meropolitan herd instinct.

IN a speakeasy row between two gorillas, one of the belligerents cried: "Listen, sweetheart, take this as a keepsake." Then with a knife he slashed a six-inch gash across his adversary's face. And the identity of a gray-haired newspaper man who reached a corner six blocks away in one minute flat is none of your business.

BIG banks are called upon more than other institutions to provide posts for relatives and friends of good customers. It seems almost every one has a few cast-off relatives they would like to have sit at pretty desks in banks. A banker tells me he has more than a thousand applicants for such positions on file. And, he added, a trifle gloomily: "In many instances we are almost forced to provide a place or lose a valuable customer."

THERE is a type of New Yorker who grows superior in telling of a meal he has enjoyed in various white-tiled restaurants around town. He gives the patronizing impression of indulging a lark—a gastronomical slumming experiment. He does not seem to know the wealthiest people are frequent patrons of moderate-priced eating places serving plain and well cooked dishes. Nothing, they say, is more monotonous than fancy food. Within the week I saw Helen Gould and her husband dining in a side street tea room. Wall Street millionaires perch on stools at those counter places with big shiny coffee urns. In a chili joint recently I saw two theatrical men with real estate holdings in the millions. The rich eat where they please, without excuse. It is the four-flusher, trying to maintain a front, whose manner is apologetic.

OF what with an elopement in the family, an extra tax assessment, a sudden step off the curb to a banana skin, and God knows what all, I have turned wanly and eagerly to a circular, reading: "Do as we tell you five minutes a day and you'll bubble with joy." I have reached that pathetic willingness to smile through the tears and do anything. I'll even admire the Paramount building.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"WHEN I was your age I wasn't gallivanting around with every Tom, Dick and Harry," sniffs Mother Jones, surveying 21-year-old daughter Sally. "I had two babies by that time and your dad and I were working night and day to buy the ranch. Young folks had some sense of responsibility then. All you've got in your head now is boys and parties and clothes. You never think of settling down and getting somewhere."

"Yeah—and who's going to pay the bills if we do?" snaps daughter Sally. "You're always talking about how young peope married early in your day, mother, and had ranches and babies before they were barely out of their teens. But you never stop to think that marriage didn't cost a quarter as much then as it does now.

"Don't you suppose we want to get married as early as you did? You bet we do. But try 'n' do it. How could Bill and I get married and have babies and buy a ranch on his $35 a week with things costing what they do now? Maybe if I worked we could get along, but you can't have babies and work in an office."

"Your father was only getting $20 a week when we married," boasts Mother Jones.

"Sure—but you lived in a little country town and all your relatives pitched in and furnished your house for you with their left overs. You've told me so yourself. And Grandma and Grandpa gave you milk and vegetables free and rent was hardly anything. We could get married young, too, if we had help like that. But try and find it! How often do you hear of modern parents carrying part of the expenses so their children can marry young? Why, when Judge Lindsay suggested it in that companionate marriage book of his, everybody threw a fit. You and Dad were just as bad as the rest of them."

"But that was different. A young man has no right to ask a girl to marry him unless he can support her. And if the parents help them it's apt to take away all their initiative."

"But Dad asked you to marry him before he could really support you. Maybe Grandpa didn't give you actual money, but it was the same as money. And it didn't destroy your initiative, did it? You could never have married young, any more than Bill and I can, if he hadn't helped you."

"And there's another thing, mother. You're always saying how terrible these petting parties are. Maybe there wouldn't be so many petting parties—and so many young people getting into trouble—if we could get married young, the way you did You never thought of that, did you?"

There's a conversation I overheard the other day. It's an important conversation because it touches the most vital problem of our modern life. I wonder what YOU think about it? Do YOU believe that parents should help young people to marry, as our grandparents helped their children? And if you don't—what IS your answer.

Tin Cans and Chicken Feet

by Herbert Kaufman

Rumor asserts that Mr. Rockefeller saves chicken feet. "They say" he parboils, peels and pops them into the soup pot.

If so, his kitchen follows the accepted practice of the best chefs, who have learned what succulence and nourishment are tucked in tidbits that average folk high-hat.

Mr. Rockefeller gives away millions, but throws away nothing.

He even bothered to count how many drops of solder were wasted in making kerosene containers, and subsequently endowed several universities with the savings from a better method of manufacturing tin cans.

Standard Oil earnings came out of salvaged lead splashes, as well as petroleum fields and by-product yields.

Gold is mined fleck by fleck—so are profits.

Want follows waste everywhere.

Securities that aren't paying regular dividends can generally trace their bargain counter position to the uncaulked cracks of management. Six per cent will keep any stock at par.

Solvency is at the mercy of every carelessly handled detail.

Where stamps aren't counted, where pencils and paper are un-supervised, and the smallest orders placed without price comparison, profits are seeping away in nickel trickles, the total of which frequently determines whether the balance sheet shall land in the red or black.

Meat packers could double their gains on a penny per pound margin.

Department stores barely keep more of their overturn than the discounts.

"Chicken feet" parsimonies and "chicken feed" items are often the determining factors in business success. They were in John Rockefeller's.

His alert eye never missed a slip or a drip. He watched for leakholes as hard as for opportunities.

That's why competitors, with identical goods and the same chance to make good, went down before him like tenpins.

The rich are seldom thriftless—which explains how they become rich.

"V" Verses by Herbert Kaufman — Vim Vigor Victory

If you make no effort to change your gauge
You cannot expect us to raise your wage—
A poor tool's value grows less with age.
Are you really the dullard that you seem?
Can't you plan and scheme?
Don't you ever dream?
You've been selling your time and your hands to date;
Have you nothing worth marketing
in your pate?

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Plain dealing is the best when all is done—Prynne.

Kindnesses are easily forgotten, but injuries!—what worthy man does not keep those in mind?—Thackeray.

Nature is not governed except by obeying her.—Bacon.

What can give us more sure knowledge than our senses? How else can we distinguish between the true and false?—Lucretius.

Avoid shame, but do not seek glory—nothing so expensive as glory. —Smith.

There is nothing more requisite in business than dispatch.—Addison.

The memory strengthens as you lay burdens upon it.—De Quincey.

Boston American's Policies For Boston-New England

FOR BOSTON:

1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land, in order that Boston properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

FOR NEW ENGLAND:

1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods
